Idle Acres, Idle Men
Cowry, Wampum or Gold?
Tell This to Franklin
American Type Killing

By Arthur Brisbane

TEN MILLION idle men and more in the United States. Ten million idle acres and more on either side of this railroad running along the Atlantic coast from southern Florida to New York.

Two of the acres, intensely cultivated, would feed a family.

Texas alone, under intensive cultivation, could feed the entire population of the earth as it exists now, and oil underneath Texas would run all the automobiles. There is an empire for you, in one single state.

And we talk about "overpopulation" with so much land not used, and none of it used with full intelligence.

Big question of the day: "What will the Supreme Court decide about the gold clause?"

If you saw two collections of savages discussing the merit of cowry shells compared with wampum, as "money," you would say "poor savages." What are we but "poor savages," worrying about the metallic or paper symbols of wealth, not realizing that earth plus intelligent use of power is the real wealth and the symbol unimportant.

The Townsend plan, $200 a month to everybody sixty years of age, is solemnly discussed by Congress, which ought to be passing a sound, reasonable, old-age pension now.

The Townsend plan is interesting in many ways. By taxation on every transaction, on producer, jobber, wholesaler, retailer, manufacturer, buyer, it would practically absorb all available money to turn it over to deserving, or otherwise, persons, aged sixty.

It would soon become necessary for some other Townsend to organize a $200 a month plan for all paupers. There would soon be twice as many paupers as there are people sixty years old.

Benjamin Franklin, supposed to have some brains, would learn with surprise about that Townsend plan, arranged to promote extravagance and waste, saying to each sixty-year-old person:

"You will get two hundred dollars every month, and you must spend it immediately, within the month. No, you may not save some of it to help your grandson through college, or to provide for your granddaughter in her next childbirth."

That plan to provide automatically for national impoverishment, substituting silly, senile spending on a gigantic scale for old-fashioned thrift, is actually discussed by the Congress of the United States, and millions of Americans favor the idiocy.

No wonder we drift into depression and have millions idle.

Angels above must smile sadly considering what has been given to the American people, and what a muddle they make of it.

Chicago reports the latest "American type" murder. Thomas E. Maloy, veteran head of Chicago's "Motion Picture Operators' Union," was killed in the usual way, as he sat at the wheel of his automobile.

The government says Mr. Maloy's career as a "union labor leader" was profitable. He had been indicted and released under $10,000 bail on a charge of failure to report three hundred and fifty thousand dollars income before the assassin's "slugs" cancelled that and other accusations.

If the leader of a motion picture union got that income, you wonder how and from whom they got it, also what other motion picture operators, who got no such sum, think about it.

In addition to income tax difficulties, Mr. Maloy had been questioned in connection with three killings, one of a man expelled from the union and later killed in Mr. Maloy's office. Since the man is dead, it is necessary to emphasize the fact that nothing had been proved against him when one "automatic" and one shotgun "brought instant death."

Fortunately, not everybody in the United States is "under water," as bankers put it, meaning "insolvent."

The Lord tempers the wind to the plucked goose. In 15 days the Miami race track took four million dollars through its betting machinery, besides other millions in admissions. Dog races, at night, took what was left, and crowds continue to pour southward.

Last Friday, when this writer went to Miami to spend one Sunday with the three interesting small children that attend school there, there was no accommodation to be had on one of the two Florida roads, and accommodation was secured by special favor on the other.

Accessibility is a great asset. California will soon realize it, as

U. S. SET For Gold RULING

EMERGENCY ACT READY

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 6 — A presidential proclamation declaring a "national emergency" and bringing sweeping executive powers into action to steady conditions was reported authoritatively today to be the first administration move planned if the Supreme Court rules adversely on the gold cases.

Such a proclamation, it was understood, would follow the court's decision within a matter of minutes, clamping on emergency restrictions to stabilize markets pending legislative remedies.

That a proclamation forms part of the legal preparations which have occupied treasury and justice experts for weeks was conceded in informed quarters, even though the same officials continued to express confidence the court will uphold the government.

Silent on Closing

President Roosevelt, in response to inquiry at his press conference today, said he had not discussed closing stock exchanges on the day the Supreme Court hands down its decision, and would not discuss this question or the case until the decision is made public.

Legal analysis declined even to designate what laws might be the foundation of a proclamation. But here are some of the things President Roosevelt may do by proclaiming a "national emergency:"

Investigate, regulate or prohibit any transactions in foreign exchange, transfers or credit and payments by banking institutions.

Lock the same rigid control on the export, hoarding, melting or earmarking of gold, silver, bullion or currency with violators subject to $10,000 fine and 10 years imprisonment, or both.

Halt the use of gold in meeting international balances—the only legal use United States gold now has as money.

Change the gold content of the dollar within the 10-point bracket of between 50 and 60 per cent of the pre-devaluation content.

Wall St. Odds Drop in Gold Case Bets

New York, Feb. 6 (INS)—Wall Street is wagering that the Supreme Court will uphold the government in the gold standard or bullion case, one of the four now before the tribunal, but the odds are rapidly coming down, it was learned from Darnell & Co., betting commissioners, today.

Starting off at 7 to 1, the odds fell to 4½ to 1 today as uncertainty over the outcome continued. About $90,000 has been wagered so far.

Gen. Smuts Better

3-ALARM Dorchester BLAZE

FIREMEN HURT, 16 ROUTED

Sixteen persons were made homeless today by a $20,000, three-alarm fire in Hansborough street, near Franklin Field, Dorchester.

Two firemen, Lieutenant William McGrath and Perry Moran, both of Engine Company 29, plunged through the second floor to the basement. Moran was treated at the engine house, but McGrath was removed to City Hospital. He has a concussion of the brain and probable internal injuries.

Although authorities said that they believed the fire was caused by a heater explosion, the Fire Department's arson squad went to the scene and began an investigation.

Hydrants Frozen

Frozen hydrants handicaped the firemen and the flames scorched adjoining houses, driving five more persons to the street.

Made homeless were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bloomsick and their three children, Eva, 18; Louis, 14, and Stephen, 6; Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Capick and their daughter, Ruth, 9; Mrs. Muriel Tattlebaum and her sister-in-law, Miss Anne Tattlebaum; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sachs and their children, Rose, 21, and Louis, 15, and Mrs. Alda Blake and her daughter, Myrna, 2.

Miss Tattlebaum, who was injured in an automobile accident yesterday, and Mrs. Capick, who was in bed with the grip, were carried out.

The temperature was below zero. The wind was strong, and blazing brands were whirled over the roofs of scores of other homes in the thickly congested district.

When firemen finally got their hoses attached to the hydrants, they said the pressure failed.

It was 20 minutes before the fire stream was directed on the building, which was then roaring like a tinderbox.

Water Shortage—at Bad Time!

A big motor pump! Its nozzle aimed and ready! But no water yet, although a three-alarm fire is menacing one of Dorchester's most thickly settled residential districts! Frozen hydrants are the answer. Another score against Old Man Winter! The burning dwelling is at 31 Hansborough street, near Franklin Field, Dorchester. Ladders are lifted to upper apartments from which 16 persons, including women and children, were forced to flee. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.

GOODWIN, Voted Registrar, WARNS 'NO FIX'

Frank A. Goodwin became registrar of motor vehicles today.

Choice of Governor Curley, he was confirmed by a 6 to 3 vote of the executive council, with salary fixed at $6000 a year.

Automatically ousted by this action, Morgan T. Ryan blamed politics and defended his administration.

Six other appointments made by the governor last week and one new nomination were unanimously confirmed by the council.

FIREBOAT SPLIT By Harbor Ice

Twelve firemen were forced to man pumps today when the forepeak of the Fireboat John P. Dowd was split by ice in the harbor.

Radio calls brought the Fireboat Matthew J. Boyle from Northern avenue. The Boyle lashed on the Dowd with towlines and ran the disabled craft to the Bethlehem ship building plant at East Boston.

COLDEST Of Winter DUE TONIGHT

Tonight may be the coldest of the season.

This was another sub-zero day in Boston, with the mercury at an official minimum of 1 below between 6 and 7 o'clock this morning. Record low for the date was 6 below in 1895.

Below zero marks in double figures were registered in many suburbs. It was —20 in Bedford, —16 in Carlisle, —15 in Lincoln and —14 at the official observation station in Concord—a drop of 32 degrees.

PLUMBER WENT UP TO FIX LEAK

Refutes Ladder Claim

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 6—A Bronx plumber testified today that an attic floor board, which the state charged was used in the Lindbergh kidnap ladder, was not noted by him to be missing when he investigated a leak in August, 1934.

Gustave Miller, the plumber, said he examined the attic at that time for six or seven minutes and could remember no boards missing.

The state has produced testimony that after Hauptmann's arrest police found a board missing from the attic, and that an upright from the kidnap ladder fitted into the vacant space, jibing with it even to the nail holes and the slant of the nails.

Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was kidnaped and slain on March 1, 1932. The state's contention is that the floorboard was torn up before that time for use in the ladder which was left near the scene of the crime.

The defense previously had failed to get into the record testimony from another witness that would have shown, Hauptmann's attorneys said, that Fisch displayed gold notes in May, 1933.

Edward J. Reilly, defense chief attorney, in answer to objection by Attorney-General David T. Wilentz, declared Bruchmann's testimony was offered "for the purpose of showing the sudden affluence of Fisch and his wealth and his display of certain gold-back bills that he had in May, 1933."

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard ruel, at a bench conference, that the defense would have to show that the money Fisch was alleged to have exhibited to Bruchmann was actually ransom money.

Earlier in the day the defense brought out that a beer stein lay on the window sill of the room from which the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped on the night of March 1, 1932.

This disclosure came while Trooper Frank A. Kelly of the New Jersey State Police was on the stand.

Fisher was endeavoring to prove to the jury the "inside job" theory of the defense.

He forced Kelly to admit that the night of the kidnaping—when the beer stein was on the window sill—it was cold and windy.

Fisher also brought out that the original ransom note left on the sill was unattached and did not blow away.

Fisher took a picture of the nursery window from among the exhibits and asked Kelly if there was anything originally on that sill which was not in the photograph.

"A beer stein," replied Kelly.

The courtroom buzzed with comment. This was something new.

"So a beer stein stood in that

Today's Testimony

Following is today's testimony in the Bruno Hauptmann trial in Flemington, N. J. Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly called as his first witness Sam Streppone, who said he was a radio repair man, living in the Bronx.

Streppone talked with a loud voice, shooting out his answers the moment he was asked a question. He is built like a pugilist. He has black hair and swarthy skin.

Reilly questioned him.

Q—What was your business on May 10, 1933?

A—I was a radio repair man.

"Yes," the witness said in his barking voice. "That's Isidor Fisch."

Reilly asked whether Fisch ever came to his shop at 334 East 117th street. Streppone said yes, on May 10, 1933.

"He came in to have a radio tested because he didn't like it," said the witness.

Q—(Holding up piece of paper)—Is this a record of the transaction? A—Yes.

The paper was introduced in evidence and Reilly showed it to the jury. The slip recorded more than $4½ worth of repair work.

Left Shoe Box There 6 Hours

Q—How long did Fisch leave the radio in your shop? A—About five days.

Q—And when Fisch came back did he have a package with him? A—Yes, a shoe box—

Attorney-General David T. Wilentz objected to the answer and it was stricken from the record.

Under Reilly's guidance, however, the witness described a package the size of a shoe box.

Q—Did Fisch leave the shoe box in your place? A—Yes, he left the box in my place from 2 until 8 that day. I didn't look into it.

Attorney-General Wilentz asked only one question on cross-examination, but it created a sensation. He asked, in quiet tones:

"Have you ever been adjudged insane?"

The audience gasped when the witness barked back:

"Yes, sir. Depressive psychosis."

"That's all," said Wilentz.

When Reilly on re-direct asked the witness if he is sane now he said emphatically:

"Yes, sir! I'm all right."

Wilentz then on re-cross-examination asked the swarthy witness:

Q—How many times have you been in institutions because of mental disorders? A—I'd make it about five times.

Q—Sure it was not eight times? A—I'd say five.

Q—At one time didn't you threaten bodily harm to one of the ladies of a charitable organization? A—Yes.

Q—And another time you wrote her filthy letters? A—Abusive language, yes, sir.

Streppone said he was merely feeling "depressed" on the occasions he was in mental institutions, but that doctors called his ailment "maniac depressive psychosis."

He insisted he was not suffering from any mental ailment at the moment.

Wilentz brought from Streppone that he had returned to Bellevue Hospital in July, 1934, for a mental condition.

Q—Then you have been in an institution since 1928? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Have you been in an institution since you fixed the radio? A—Yes, sir.

Streppone said he had come to Flemington yesterday with Malcolm Weiss, of Reilly's office.

He was excused after Reilly adduced that he had been discharged from Bellevue Hospital in July, 1934, after five days.

Grilled on Kidnap Ladder

Lieutenant Paul Sjostrom, investigator for the New Jersey state police, was called as the next witness and an argument ensued between Defense Counsel C. L. Lloyd Fisher and Attorney-General Wilentz on the whereabouts of the kidnap ladder.

The defense was permitted to examine the ladder last night and Wilentz indicated it had not been restored to the state's custody.

Late last night a state trooper on duty at the courthouse was instructed by his superiors that no one but Arthur J. Koehler, federal wood expert, and Detective Lewis J. Bornman of the state police were to be permitted to see the ladder.

Police officers were dispatched to bring the ladder, which had been examined a second time by two local business men, familiar with lumber.

The ladder, having been in the county clerk's office all night, was brought in.

Sjostrom told Fisher he did not have his photographs or reports on the examination of the ladder in court.

Fisher tried to show that the photographs did not give a complete view of every part of the ladder and that the parts pictured could not be identified.

Q—Did you have in your possession fingerprint photos from the ladder? A—Yes.

The witness said the pictures were made by a subordinate. He was not present.

Fisher then asked for the photos. The state said they would be produced later.

125 Fingerprints Found on Ladder

Fisher took a section of the kidnap ladder and Sjostrum explained how big an area of it could be photographed at one time. It was a piecemeal job.

Fisher asked him if he photographed part of the ladder rail, indicating a section from the top to the bottom of the rail. The witness said he had not.

Q—How many photographs were taken? A—Sixty-eight.

Q—Does this mean there were 68 fingerprints on the ladder? A—No, there were approximately 125.

Q—How about the palm prints, were there any of those? A—Yes, palm marks.

Q—Were they photographed too? A—They were.

Fisher asked when photographs of the fingerprints were taken.

"On March 21, 1932," said the officer.

Q—Do you mean to say that you waited 21 days to take photographs of the prints on that ladder? A—Yes.

Q—Why. A—There were no fingerprints on it then.

Q—No fingerprints? What do you mean? Where did the 125 fingerprints come from? A—Well—

Q—As a matter of fact your own expert processed the ladder and found nothing, and it was not until Dr. Hudson examined the ladder that the fingerprints were found—isn't that true? A—None of value. There were so many.

Found No Prints After Crime

The investigator said the state police had examined the ladder immediately after arrival at the estate after the crime and found no prints.

He said he "understood" the police wore gloves when handling the ladder and none of their prints appeared.

The lieutenant said Dr. Hudson did not process the ladder, but only demonstrated his silver nitrate method to state troopers who later employed it in their hunt for prints.

He also testified he had never submitted the ransom notes to Hudson for examination.

Sjostrum said no fingerprints were found on the ransom notes, either.

Q—Now, about the ransom notes, your men found no fingerprints on the ransom notes, did they? A—No.

Q—Were they given to Dr. Hudson for processing? A—No.

Q—As a matter of fact, nobody outside of your department—no outside expert—ever examined those notes, isn't that true? A—Yes, that is true.

Q—Did you ever advise Dr. Hudson 1200 fingerprints were taken from the ladder? A—No, sir, I never did.

Q—Or that 1200 pictures were taken? A—No.

The witness was handed the prints and asked to pick out photos of the third section of the ladder. He selected nine and handed them to Fisher.

"I wasn't present when these were taken," he protested. "This is just the way I catalogue them."

Q—Is this photo here from the second or third section? A—Either the second or third. I couldn't say which.

Q—Now, you tried to run down the identity of the persons whose fingerprints were found on the ladder, didn't you? A—Yes.

Q—How many of the more than 100 prints did you identify? A—About eight.

Q—Did you ever find the fingerprints of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, this defendant, on the ladder? A—No, sir.

"That's all," said Fisher.

Cross-Examination

On cross-examination, Attorney-General Wilentz asked:

POLICE Grilled on LADDER

125 PRINTS ON IT THEY ADMIT

Q—If the man who built this ladder wore gloves, his fingerprints would not have been there, would they? A—No.

Q—And isn't it the practice of criminals to wear gloves in the commission of crime? A—Yes.

Fisher intervened to ask:

Q—A mother or a nurse putting a baby to bed doesn't wear gloves, in your experience? A—Not in my experience.

Wilentz brought out that handling by several persons would probably obliterate original prints, making them worthless.

Sjostrum told Fisher that he didn't know whether the silver nitrate process would "bring back" old prints.

He pointed out, when questioned by Wilentz, that the process was unknown to the state police on March 1, 1932. Many hands had been on the ladder, including those of members of Governor Moore's crime commission, expert police officials from all parts of the country, before the silver nitrate process was applied.

Officer Admits "He Doesn't Know"

On re-direct examination, Fisher asked Sjostrum if it was not a fact that wood is more retentive of fingerprints than practically any other substance. The officer didn't know.

Q—Don't you, as a matter of fact, know that if you touch a piece of wood firmly, your print will be so deeply ingrained that the wood can be sandpapered and your print still be found there with the silver nitrate, or acid, process? A—No. I do not know that.

Fisher pounded away at the failure of the police to take pictures of entire pieces of the ladder, for the purpose of showing just where, on the ladder, the fingers were located.

"We have marked the photographs to show on what sections of the ladder the various pictures were taken," said the officer.

Fisher asked:

"I did not!" said Sjostrum indignantly.

Trooper Testifies

Trooper Louis Kubler was called to the stand.

He said he was at the Lindbergh home from March 10-14, 1932, and assisted Trooper Kelly in processing the ladder for fingerprints.

He said they found no prints whatever, but that Dr. E. M. Hudson came to the estate on March 13 and began processing the ladder with the newly-developed silver nitrate process.

This work was started in the basement of the Lindbergh home. It brought out "about 120" fingerprints, Kublet said.

Q—Isn't it a fact that a member of the State police wrote Dr. Hudson that more than 500 prints had been brought out by the process? A—I don't know.

Q—What color does the silver nitrate leave wood after it is used in processing for fingerprints? A—Black.

Hints Prints Washed Off

Fisher, further questioning Kubler, intimated the ladder was washed with bichloride of mercury to eliminate the fingerprints.

Q—(Pointing at ladder)—Well, how did that ladder get back to its normal color? A—I don't know.

Q—Isn't it a fact that bichloride of mercury eliminates fingerprints? A—Yes.

Q—Well, who washed that ladder with bichloride of mercury? A—I don't know. I don't know that anybody did.

The witness admitted he had taken photographs of the fingerprints on the ladder but had not identified them as to the parts of the ladder from which they were taken.

Q—Do you know whether Dr. Hudson was permitted to process the ransom notes for fingerprints? A—I don't know, I never saw the ransom notes.

Q—And you're a member of the identification bureau? A—Yes.

Fisher asked Kubler if he had used Dr. Hudson's process since March, 1932, and the witness said, "Yes."

"And found fingerprints on wood?" continued Fisher.

"No."

"Let me refresh your memory," said Fisher. "Didn't you use the silver nitrate process on a murder case to bring out fingerprints on the handle of a pick axe?"

"That's not a fact!" boomed Kubler.

The witness said an individual may leave a print at one time but another fail to leave a print.

"Then the science of fingerprinting is not exact?"

Kubler was cross-examined by Attorney General Wilentz.

Q—If there were no fingerprints near the nail hole you wouldn't photograph that part of the ladder, would you? A—No.

Q—You can't identify a person by a nail hole? A—No.

"It seems to me the attorney general is trying to identify a person by a nail hole," scoffed Fisher.

"I beg your pardon," exclaimed Wilentz, "but I am not."

Beer Stein on Window Sill

Trooper Frank A. Kelly, who was in charge of the fingerprint work after the crime on March 1, 1932, was recalled to the stand.

Fisher asked him if he had processed all the sill and the glass of the window of the Lindbergh baby's nursery. He had. The suitcase which was on the floor under the window?

"Yes."

"All parts of the room?"

"Yes."

Q—Now, the day you went there to examine that window, was there an object on that window sill not shown in this picture? A—Yes sir.

Q—What was it? A—A beer stein.

Q—So that a beer stein stood in that window when the kidnaper supposedly crawled in and out of the window the night of the kidnaping and it was undistubed? Is that correct? A—I don't know about that.

Q—What else was on the window sill? A—A ransom note.

Q—Was the ransom note attached to anything? A—No.

Renews Idea of Inside Job

Q—What kind of a night was it the night of the kidnaping? A—It was cold.

Q—It was pretty windy, wasn't it? A—Yes.

After making this dramatic bid to renew the impression of an "inside job," Fisher switched again to the manner in which the ladder had been processed for fingerprints and photographed.

Q—Did you ever tell Dr. Hudson that over 500 prints were found on the ladder? A—I don't know.

Q—You weren't able to find any prints when you first processed it? A—No.

Q—How many times did you process the ladder with your old powder method? A—Twice. I went over it twice on March 2.

Kelly said Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police, ordered him to go over the ladder the second time when the first effort proved fruitlss.

Wilentz objected and was sustained.

"I wouldn't know," he responded.

Q—Take the entire ladder. You don't know what two inches of the ladder is in that picture? A—It's not necessary.

Fisher said he did not agree with him. Wilentz objected and Justice Trenchard ordered Fisher's observation stricken from the record.

Fisher demanded that the witness be instructed to answer the question.

"You create the confusion by your remark, Mr. Fisher. We'd get along better without it," said Justice Trenchard.

Fisher continued to go over the same ground he covered with the two previous witnesses, forcing the admission that it cannot be determined from the police photographs on what part of the ladder the fingerprints were found.

The defense attorney again stressed the failure of police to photograph any part of the ladder showing any of the nail holes in it.

Q—Didn't you at one time remark on the significance of a nail hole in that ladder to Dr. Hudson? A—I never discussed the construction of the ladder with Dr. Hudson?

Q—Do you know Dr. Hudson's secretary—Miss McGill? A—Yes.

Q—You have talked with her several times, haven't you, A—Yes.

Q—Didn't you hunt the country

'No Interest'

By International News Service

This announcement was made by an official government spokesman today in answer to reports the Reich had sent an official to Flemington, N. J., to observe the Hauptmann trial.

The reports had mentioned Captain Frederick Kirsch, correspondent for the Berlin newspaper "12 Uhr Blatt," and now in Flemington.

TESTIMONY ON FISCH OUT

window when the kidnaper crawled in and out of the window in getting the baby and the beer stein was not disturbed—is that right?" demanded Fisher.

"I don't know that," said Kelly.

Fisher glanced at the jury of four women and eight men. He seemed pleased at having made what he thought was a significant point.

A few minutes later, in cross-examination, Attorney-General Wilentz brought out that the beer stein was in a recess of the window and that the kidnaper could have passed through the window without disturbing the stein.

The defense today also reemphasized the absence of Hauptmann's fingerprints on the kidnap ladder and pursued further its contention that the dead Isidor Fisch was the receiver of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom.

The defense called Lieutenant Paul Sjostrom of the New Jersey state police and learned from him that of 68 fingermarks found on the ladder—after it had been handled "by hundreds of people"—only eight were identified, and none of these were Hauptmann's.

The prosecution immediately brought out that if Hauptmann had handled the ladder and had worn gloves, his fingerprints would not be found.

The prints found, it was testified, were produced by a silver-nitrate method discovered after the kidnaping date, March 1, 1932. Several police have testified no fingerprints of value were found on the ladder immediately after the crime.

Sergeant Louis Kubler, a New Jersey trooper sometimes assigned to fingerprint work, was examined along similar lines, and Trooper Kelly before he told about the beer stein, related again his failure to find any fingerprints in the Lindbergh nursery or upon the crib from which the baby was stolen.

The defense emphasized the absence of nursery fingerprints, and hammered on the point that Mrs. Ann Morrow Lindbergh, the baby's mother, and Betty Gow, the nurse, had been in the nursery and handled the crib just prior to the kidnaping.

Sam Streppone, a Bronx radio repairman who acknowledged on cross-examination that he had been in an institution for maniac depressive psychosis, said Fisch called for a repaired radio in May, 1933, and left a shoe box with him for six hours, picking it up again himself.

Hauptmann claimed that Fisch, now dead, left a shoe box with him on December 1, 1933, and that he (Hauptmann) was unaware that the box contained $14,600 in Lindbergh ransom money.

TENSE COURT WAITS MOVE TO BLOW ROOF OFF CASE

By ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 6—There were no Hauptmann finger prints on the kidnap ladder.

Everybody connected with the identification bureau of the state of New Jersey has now been on the witness stand and definitely agreed upon that point.

We have had captains, lieutenants, sergeants and troopers today and they all swear to that—there were none of Bruno Hauptmann's finger-prints on the ladder.

There was a time when the defense almost succeeded in convincing us that if there had been any they wouldn't have known how to find them.

Whether or not that is a point in Hauptmann's favor, I don't know.

One fact appeared clearly this morning.

Kick at Kelly

You can kick a Kelly around just so long and no longer.

Trooper Frank A. Kelly, who made the first examinations for finger prints in the Lindbergh home immediately following the kidnaping took quite a beating when he was on the stand as a prosecution witness.

He had been called that night in the middle of the night, he had done his best—and it did appear at that time that he might have done better.

But today under Mr. Fisher's direct examination, re-called as a witness for the defense, Trooper Kelly's Irish came to his rescue, and he testified clearly, definitely and with excellent effect for himself.

He gave us a pretty clear picture of finger printing and he managed to get over a couple of illuminating statements, such as that nowadays most criminals are too smart to leave fingerprints around anyhow, and that finger printing in real life isn't always as simple as it is made to be in detective fiction.

Shiver at Witness

We began the day in a way that sent cold shivers down our spines. The first defense witness said bluntly that he had been confined to eight asylums.

He also said that Isador Fisch brought him a radio and left a shoe box with him for eight hours. I do not suppose that the fact that he has spent so much time in asylums should prejudice against his story. In fact he seemed to me one of the most competent witnesses to testify to the Fisch story that the defense has yet produced.

But a little feeling of nausea swept over us at the thought of another long day like yesterday, of more witnesses of this same type, while Hauptmann grows thinner and paler, and Lindbergh turns his head away in a sort of protesting agony, and Judge Trenchard looks helpless and baffled and angry.

What is Reilly building towards?

Are we waiting for that bombshell?

Has Reilly got something up his sleeve, some unexpected testimony which will, in street parlance, blow the roof right off the courthouse? Is there something brewing that will be real and definite testimony for Hauptmann?

The feeling is growing upon us here in the courtroom that there is, that there must be. That feeling of suspense is beginning to be felt, as each new witness appears, as each new name is called by the counsel for the defense.

Will this be the man with the bombshell for Hauptmann? Will this be the man who will give us one big vital piece of evidence in Hauptmann's defense?

It increases the tension in the court room.

Wilentz's summation, which ought to be one of the finest things ever heard in an American courtroom, if Mr. Wilentz lives up to his promise in this case.

And the verdict.

Debs Face Ban On 'Ads For Profit'

New York, Feb. 6 (AP)—The question of whether Junior Leaguers should use the prestige of their membership for personal profit in endorsing commercial articles was slated for consideration today at an executive session of the organization.

The executive board of the Junior Leagues of America, Canada, Mexico and Hawaii yesterday opened a four-day conference here. The league has discouraged the practice of its members lending their names and memberships to advertisements such as those of cosmetics, but it has been difficult to enforce the ban.

Recommendations under consideration now will put teeth into the old rules.

A Story in Pictures: Two Fays—and One Faye!

Fay Webb No Longer "Glamour Girl"; Alice Faye May Be Named

This is the way Fay Webb with whom Rudy Vallee, idol of millions, fell in love. This is the "Glamour Girl," the magazine cover girl, the girl with the flashing smile, the laughing eyes, the flower-petal skin. This is Fay Webb as she looked when Rudy Vallee married her.

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

And another Faye. What a difference one "e" makes. Alice Faye, who made her film reputation by starring with Rudy Vallee and singing "Oh, You Nasty Man," is frequently linked in romantic stories with the crooner. Both, however, have denied that they are "that way" about each other.

RUDY VALLEE ATTORNEY BUSHEL

Rudy Vallee, crooner extraordinary, is "no angel," according to his father-in-law, but Rudy and his attorney, Hyman Bushel, both shown in court above, are bent, they say, on showing that Mrs. Fay Webb Vallee, Rudy's estranged wife, was no angel, either, but "the most disloyal wife any man ever had." (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Rudy's $146,000 Bared; Court to Hear Fay's Talk

By DOROTHY ROE

(Universal Service Staff Correspondent)

New York, Feb. 6—The first round of the great Fay Webb-Rudy Vallee matrimonial fight ended with time out for a quick checkup on the crooning champ's monetary assets. Rudy didn't know what his pulse-quickening voice earned in 1932, 1933 or 1934.

He ddn't know "within $100,000," but an accountant testified that Rudy had earned $146,000 from radio work alone in 1934, and had received a salary and divdends of $64,250 from his incorporated orchestra.

There was mention of such sums as $4000 a week in the movies, and an orchestra tour in 1930 that netted him $88,000.

The courtroom of Justice Salvatore Cotillo was about to be entertained with a phonograph recital of Fay's cryptic telephone conversations from the Vallee menage when counsel for Mrs Vallee moved for an adjournment of the hearing until Thursday, to give a bevy of certified accountants a chance to go into action on the amount of Rudy's earnings.

But the adjournment came only after the principals had exchanged a series of dagger looks across the counsel table, and after Fay had burst into hysterics as her father, Police Chief Clarence E. Webb of Santa Monica, Cal., recounted from the witness stand alleged "tricks and artifices" by which his daughter had been snared into accepting $100 a week from America's favorite crooner.

The contenders appeared unequally matched as they entered the ring. Fay, white-faced, black clad and swathed in mink, tottered into court on the arm of her father.

He didn't croon his answers when he took the witness stand. He said defiantly that he had "not the slightest idea" of his earnings during 1932, 1933 or 1934.

Justice Cotillo insisted.

"I don't care how much he made. It's beside the point. It's evident that if Mrs. Vallee was a dutiful wife—and I don't know whether she was or not—$100 a week is not sufficient."

As court adjourned for the accountants' huddle, Attorney Hyman Bushel, for Rudy, promised that the records of Fay's telephone conversation with a gentleman not her father would far surpass the father's recital in dramatic interest. He told the court:

"We will show that Mrs. Vallee was the most disloyal wife alive."

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 6—A week from today, unless the Hauptmann trial prophets are wrong, one of the constables in the Hunterdon county courthouse will climb to the bell tower and pull the bell rope.

The verdict in Bruno Hauptmann's trial for life will be ready.

This is the traditional way of announcing in Hunterdon county that a jury is ready to announce its decision. It has been done in so many cases that no one remembers offhand when the practice started.

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 6—Dispatch to the Wilmington Morning News from Reid's Grove, Md., today says that bills, believed to be from the Lindbergh baby ransom money, have been received by Postmaster Julian B. Brinsfield.

Brinsfield said he received through cash transactions, $15 in notes, numbers of which checked with the advertised numbers on the ransom notes. The dispatch says:

"Postmaster Brinsfield believes he received the money from truck drivers who visited markets in New Jersey and New York city with eastern shore produce and other goods," the dispatch adds.

Peeved, Wants TO TESTIFY

By Associated Press

Yonkers, N. Y., Feb. 6—Alfred Budreau, resident of Yonkers for more than three years, angered because his "good name has been dragged in the mud of the Hauptmann trial," today demanded that he be allowed to testify in denial of testimony linking him with Isidor Fisch.

Budreau heard himself mentioned only in a broadcast of Mrs. Bertha Hoff's testimony in Flemington yesterday.

She was called by Hauptmann's defense as part of the effort to show that Fisch collected the Lindbergh ransom money.

Budreau denied today that he ever knew Fisch or had ever visited Mrs. Hoff with another man.

Saves Relief BILL

DEFEATS 'DOLE' SUBSTITUTE

Washington, Feb. 6—A Democratic attempt to scuttle the administration's $4,880,000,000 work relief bill by substituting a $2,880,000,000 "dole" lost by a 10 to 10 tie vote in the Senate appropriations committee today.

The "dole" proposal was made by Senator Adams (D.) Colorado, supported by Senator Carter Glass (D.), Virginia, committee chairman.

It was supported generally by Republicans on the committee.

When the vote was taken, it appeared the substitute had been adopted by a 10 to 9 vote, but Senator McAdoo (D.) California, arrived and voted for the President's measure.

This created a tie, defeating the substitute.

Democratic proposals for limiting the President's powers in administering the huge $4,000,000,000 work fund were adopted unanimously.

These forbid him using any of the money to "relieve economic maladjustments," or to guarantee loans to "needy individuals."

Two whole sections of the bill were scrapped. These would have given Mr. Roosevelt broad powers to merge, consolidate, or abolish emergency government agencies.

At the instance of the Democrats again, the committee also voted unanimously to limit the President's expenditure of the huge work fund to projects "of types as are or may be authorized by law."

This retained in Congress the last word on approving projects to be constructed with money from the fund whereas the original bill as passed by the House gave the President unlimited authority to construct projects of his own choice.

STEIN ON SILL OF KIDNAP WINDOW

On Night of Crime

Q—And didn't you find several like it in the Negro sections of the South? A—We never found anything even remotely resembling the kidnap ladder.

Kelly said he had sent to Washington to try to learn the age of the wood

Q—Now, did you ever try to find fingerprints on the ransom notes? A—Yes. I found nothing of value.

Q—You examined the notes after they had been read and handled, but found nothing of value? A—I found nothing of value.

Q—Do you know whether Dr. Hudson was permitted to process the notes with his silver nitrate process? A—I don't know.

Fisher asked if Kelly knew that wood could be sandpapered and still would show a fingerprint six months old.

"Yes," said the witness, "that could be done on a board imprinted for laboratory purposes."

Before relinquishing Kelly for cross-examination, Fisher asked the witness if he had any of his equipment in the courtroom. He had not.

Kelly Is Cross-Examined

On cross-examination, Attorney-General David T. Wilentz took the witness to a window behind the judge's bench and, illustrating, asked:

"Now, that window sill extended on the inside of the room against the wall, didn't it?"

"Yes," said the trooper.

Q—So that an object could be placed on the sill? A—Yes.

Q—And isn't that where you found the beer stein? A—Yes.

Q—So that the beer stein on the window sill of the Lindbergh nursery was inside the room and not in the opening of the window? A—Yes.

Q—Good. Now, if the kidnaper came through the window of the Lindbergh nursery and was wearing gloves he would have left no finger prints, would he? A—No...

Q—"That's all," said Wilentz.

Photograph Is Excluded

Fisher again questioned the witness. He showed him a photograph and asked:

"Did you take this photograph?"

"I don't know."

Q—You won't say yes and you won't say no, is that it? A—Yes.

A—Well, is the stein on the windowsill shown there in the window or not? A—No, it's in a recess.

Fisher looked astonished and the audience laughed.

"Well, then,," said Fisher, angrily, "we'll offer it in evidence and let the jury decide!"

Taxi Man Says He Knew Fisch

Oscar J. Bruckmann, a chauffeur, was then called to the stand, and Attorney Reilly questioned him.

The witness, a slender, dark-complexioned man, said he lives in New York city. Asked if he knew the late Isidor Fisch:

"Yes, I met him when I worked in the pie bakery business in 1930," said Buckman. "I was a chauffeur. I saw Fisch around there. I worked for him.

Q—Did you see him after you left his employ? A—Yes. In 1933.

The witness explained that at that time he was engaged in "hacking for an independent concern."

Q—Do you mean driving a taxi? A—Yes.

Bruckmann said he saw Frisch in May, 1933, at Broadway and 65th street, New York city. It was about 7 o'clock in the evening and the witness was at his hack stand.

"Mr. Fisch said to me," began Bruckmann.

Court Refuses to Admit Questions

Reilly retorted: "I want to show the sudden affluence of Fisch and his display of gold back bills."

"I object to this," said Wilentz. "This taking words from the lips of a dead man that are impossible to meet."

Reilly argued "I intend to show that Fisch flashed a number of yellow backed bills. It's unfortunate that he is dead."

Wilentz's objection was sustained.

"Well, then," Reilly asked the witness, "what did Fisch do when he came up to you?"

Another objection was made.

The attorneys drew aside before the judge and argued the matter. They talked for several mintues.

The witness watched thehm with interest.

Didn't See Any Gold Notes

Justice Trenchard ruled Bruchmann could answer the question as to what Fisch did on the night he came to Bruchmann's back stand in 1933.

"Fisch showed a roll of bills and gave me a $5 bill," said Bruchmann. "I don't know whether he had gold notes or not."

"Was the fare $5," asked Reilly.

"No," said the witness.

"I intend to show that Fisch was throwing his money away."

Wilentz's objection was sustained.

"That's all," said Reilly.

"No cross-examination," said Wilentz, and the witness was excused.

Plumber Tells of Roof Leak

The next witness was Gustave Miller, who shouted his name to the clerk in a loud voice.

Speaking in the same loud voice he said he is a licensed plumber of New York City. He is a tall, thin man, with graying hair and horn-rimmed spectacles.

He said that in August, 1934, he had called at the home of Mrs. Rausch, in the Bronx (where Hauptmann lived) to do some repair work.

Miller said Mrs. Rausch told him there was a leak in the Hauptmann roof. He went there, and the Hauptmanns told him there was a leak in a close closet. He said it was a "small closet in the corner."

Reilly showed him a picture of the closet. He identified it.

Saw no Attic Board Missing

He said water leaked in on the box and when he removed it he —the money which turned out to be found it contained a small fortune Lindbergh ransom bills.

Miller stood up on the witness stand when asked to tell how water was leaking into the Hauptmann closet.

Waving his arms and facing the jury, he shouted a story of how he repaired the leak by going into the attic. He was quite dramatic in describing how he did this routine job.

He said he had his raincoat on. He said the leaky pipe ran to the left of and behind some shelves in the closet.

It was on one of these shelves Hauptmann said he had put the shoe box.

There were several mild outbursts of laughter at the extremely serious and emphatic manner of the witness.

Under further questioning by Reilly, Miller said that when he went into the Hauptmann attic, he found no boards missing from there.

3 "LEFT WINGERS" Leave AAA

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP)—Jerome Frank, AAA general counsel and three of his aides, all known as "left wingers," resigned today as a result of a general reorganization of the Farm Administration intended to remove internal strife.

The shake-up was ordered yesterday by Chester C. Davis, AAA Administrator, with the approval of Secretary Wallace, and opened the way for the resignation of Davis himself probably after Congress adjourns.

President Roosevelt said today he knew nothing of the move and called it an internal affair.

Yacht Honeymoon

Ginger, Lew Go Nautical

Maybe it's because she and her brand new husband, Lew Ayres, want real deep sea privacy—or maybe it's because she looks so charming in this yachting cap—but anyhow Ginger Rogers of the movies is going nautical for her honeymoon, she says.

GINGER and Lew Sail Soon ON HONEYMOON

(Copyright, 1935, International News Service)

Hollywood, Feb. 6—On a borrowed yacht, stocked for a four weeks' cruise, Ginger Rogers and Lew Ayres shortly will begin the honeymoon which Hollywood, up to now, had denied them.

The newlyweds aren't telling their destination or their exact starting date. Only that they leave as soon as Ginger finishes the picture "Star at Midnight" for R-K-O.

The film couple are then to have a month's vacation—in Ginger's case the first rest in four pictures.

Although they slipped away to Palm Springs after the ceremony, Ginger and Lew have had little privacy since they were married, November 14. They reported back to work in four days and both have been busy most of the time.

Even the studios aren't to know where the honeymooners are cruising. Or, at least, that is their fond hope. The only means of communication with the world will be a radio.

A desert island, in Lew Ayres' opinion, would be okay with him as a honeymoon spot—so long as lovely Ginger Rogers, his bride, were there. But since the island is hardly practical, Lew has borrowed a yacht, stocked it for four weeks' voyage and ordered it to stand by for his wedding trip.

CURB On Utilities ASKED

'WHITE HOUSE' BILL FILED

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 6—Legislation to carry President Roosevelt's projected control of utilities a long step farther by "elimination of public utility holding companies" was introduced today by Chairman Rayburn (D., Texas), of the House interstate commerce committee.

Although the measure was claimed to be an "administration" bill in the usual sense, it was put in after a White House conference yesterday and Mr. Roosevelt knew of its contents.

The legislation, as explained by Rayburn, would:

1. Simplify Holding Company structures and eliminate economically unrelated properties.
2. Confine Holding Company investments to public utility activities.
3. Control future security issues and acquisitions "to prevent further growth of pyramided structures and economically unsound systems."
4. Require adequate reports to bare financial condition and intercorporate relationships.
5. Eliminate common control of electric utility properties and interstate gas transmission.
6. Establish the principle that a holding company shall not profit from dealings with its own subsidiaries and that service and other companies be organized on "a truly co-operative basis."
7. Impose rigid control of intercorporate relations "wherever there is an absence of arm's-length dealing."
8. Effect "necessary reorganizations of holding companies under federal administrative control."

DENBY'S Brother WAS SHIP AGENT

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP)—Testimony that Charles Denby, brother of President Harding's Secretary of the Navy, was employed in 1922 and 1923 as a representative of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation in the Orient was received today by the Senate Munitions Committee.

It came from N. R. Parker, treasurer of the company who identified the agent as brother of Edwin Denby, Secretary of the Navy from 1921 to Feb. 18, 1924.

Denby was employed at $500 a month salary and $1000 a month traveling expenses, but his total earnings, a company report disclosed, was $5048 from November, 1922, to July, 1923.

He was to receive 5 per cent commission on net profits for any building business he obtained, but the report commented:

"No commissions were earned or paid."

The younger of the two men declared that the incandescent lamp in his laboratory was practical and satisfactory. The difficulty was in getting the electricity to supply it.

The older man contended that this should not prove a difficulty. Admitting that he was no engineer, and knew nothing of electricity, he nevertheless had seen batteries that produced electricity, as well as the young man's "dynamo-electric machine, which, when run by a belt, gave off plenty of it.

"You mark my words," said he, shaking his finger at the younger man, "the day is coming when every house and every public building will be lighted by electricity. Great electric works will distribute electricity in every street in every city in the country, just as gas and water are now distributed."

The younger man shook his head. Batteries, he insisted, would quickly exhaust themselves. A room full of them would be necessary for even a few lights, and, requiring constant cleaning and renewal, they would be thoroughly impractical.

Man of Vision

The "dynamo-electric" machine was all right, but the trouble was that if half the lights were turned off, the pressure, or voltage, would rise, and the other lights would get too much.

If several lights were turned off, the electric pressure would rise so high that it would burn out all the remaining lights.

Sees the Way

The younger man sought to explain the difference between supplying electricity and supplying gas.

However, he went on, there was no way to store electricity in a reservoir, as gas was stored. The "dynamo-electric" machine must generate the exact demand from moment to moment.

Then, thumping the table, and, with a new light flashing across his face, he exclaimed:

"By Jove! I've got it! I see how to build an automatic regulator that will do the job!"

A great idea had been born—eventually to make possible the distribution of electric light and power.

The older man was the late Spencer D. Schuyler, afterwards president of the United States Electric Lighting Company.

The younger was the late Sir Hiram Stevens Maxim, who became chief engineer of the company. The awed and excited small boy was the writer.

STRANDED SHIP Refloats Self

Seattle, Feb. 6 (AP)—The freighter Lewis Luckenbach went aground today in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, near Port Townsend, but refloated herself a few hours later, the coast guard reported.

Captain Louis Nash wirelessed the coast guard cutter Red Wing: "We are off now and in no danger of going aground again."

RICH Auto Dealer MISSING

BROCKTON WIFE FEARS KIDNAP

Brockton, Feb. 6—Believed by his wife to be a victim of foul play or kidnaping, David Casef, 39, well-to-do auto dealer, was sought by police today.

His car was found without lights at Ames and Sparks streets on the city outskirts last night.

His wallet and driving license were on the seat. The wallet contained a small check but no money, although Casef was known to be carrying money when he left his home a few hours earlier to attend a meeting of auto dealers at Taunton.

His wife said today:

"His disappearance is not voluntary. I believe it is foul play or kidnaping. He had money—I don't know how much, and he always wore diamonds."

Casef is the father of three children. He lives at 110 Morse avenue.

Police found no trace of him at Taunton and believe he did not reach there.

Signs of an Early Spring

The Rhubarb Pie Season officially opens in Boston at Thompson's Spa tomorrow.

"Get every pound you can lay your hands on," we told our purchasing agent when we sampled the first rhubarb a few days ago. He did—and bought two tons for our first day's requirements. Two tons of rhubarb will make a lot of pie . . . but even so, if past years are any guide we can't guarantee there'll be enough to go around.

Come early for this preview of Spring —it goes with the popular complete lunch combinations at 40, 50 and 60 cents.

FEARS A GOWN TOO LOW

By Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 6—She is very different from what one might expect, this mother of quintuplets and five other children, 10 youngsters in all —and only 26 years old!

A simple country lass, Mrs. Oliva Dionne, has come out of her Canadian north woods in a plain home-made brown crepe dress to be housed in a regal suite in a large hotel here, a famous personage with theatrical producers ringing her telephone.

Child-like is this woman, who has little to say and that in French only.

But very maternal is this mother who, although her intelligence makes her agreeable to science, rebels now and then, it was learned through associates, at the ultra-modern way of raising babies as practiced for the quintuplets by Dr. Allen Dafoe and two nurses.

But she takes the Spartan routine cheerfully, it was ascertained from Mrs. Joseph Rochon of North Bay, Ontario, a cousin of her husband's and a member of the Dionne traveling party.

Dream to Her

With courage the shy Callander, Ontario, mother, whose longest railroad trip was her honeymoon journey to Ottawa in 1925, faced the repeated blare of photographers' flash-lights, the onslaught of reportorial questions, the movie reels.

At times she gives the impression that to her it is all a dream—that she today was to shop in some of the country's biggest department stores for beautiful new clothes, including a dinner dress.

And what woman wouldn't get a thrill out of a new party dress. But Mrs. Dionne was worrying for fear a dinner dress might be just a little too low.

On the Dionnes' program is a visit to a night club, and appearances on theatrical stages in Chicago and Detroit.

The husband obeyed, of course, but looked out when his wife said indignantly, "You are peeking," and replied, "Yes, and while I have the spirit of a man, I will peek."

The Senate is the man under the bed. The House of Representatives voted to President Roosevelt, to be spent in accordance with his judgment, four thousand eight hundred and eighty million dollars, and now a group of senators insist on "peeking."

They want to know what will be done with the $4,880,000,000 before approving the action of the House.

Senators would attach strings to the money and strike from the bill two words that would enable the President to spend the money to remedy "economic maladjustment."

Those two words offend senators. One told a reporter they would let the President "finance and indemnify any livery stable owner, ruined by taxicab competition." The Senate knows perfectly well that the President has no such plan.

The senatorial "peekers" would limit the President's right to spend for building, "to projects heretofore or hereafter authorized by law," which would take the money from the President and give it to Congress.

'Taxpayers that will have the pleasure of supplying the four billions eight hundred and eighty millions would rather have the President spend it. They know that in the spending there would be no graft, if he could prevent it, and ONE MAN RESPONSIBLE is better than three or four hundred.

But Roses Please 'Quins' Mother More

MRS. ELZIRE DIONNE — OLIVA DIONNE

Of all the gifts and honors showered upon her and her husband in Chicago, Mrs. Elzire Dionne, mother of the world's only living quintuplets, seemed most delighted by this fragrant bouquet of red roses. Orchids, actual and figurative, were presented her, of course, but she preferred to carry the crimson blossoms. Here she is, with her new finger-wave—and with her husband, who without a doubt deserves an "orchid," too.

NO RECOVERY ANTICIPATED

New Deal Provisions Create Permanent Pauper Class

By ROBERT H. HEMPHILL
Financial Authority

At recurrent intervals in the history of civilization combinations of extraordinary circumstances have placed within control of one man the opportunity and power to profoundly affect the course of human events.

Those few great leaders who have measured up to such opportunities have invariably proceeded along well defined lines of such direct, simple and logical character that each step inspired the increasing confidence without which all great movements must fail.

In startling contrast to the convincing simplicity and clarity of the proceedings of these great leaders, is the hesitant, confused and illogical program—the ill-assorted conglomeration of measures assembled under the misleading caption THE NEW DEAL.

A deeper scrutiny of these various apparently contradictory measures, reveals a faint but distinguishable pattern running through them all.

Amounts of money which stagger the imagination are to be expended for relief purposes. No further talk of priming the pump or recovery of normal business as the principal objective.

The NRA, with new and improved devices for further and more effective regimentation of industry and commerce, is to be extended with more than a hint of incorporation as a permanent and controlling factor in our economic set-up, and this despite the established fact that it has retarded rather than advanced recovery.

Outstanding among the vicious retained provisions are the sections limiting production and prohibiting expansion of private enterprise.

THEY PROVIDE FOR AND GUARANTEE A PERMANENT IDLE PAUPER CLASS OF TEN MILLION WORKERS AND THEIR DEPENDENTS—FORTY MILLION OF OUR POPULATION.

The organization would act as an exchange of municipal information of benefit to cities and towns of the State.

PRESIDENT Sees Gain IN RUM WAR

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today the government has gained the upper hand in the war on bootleggers.

Aroused by more than 30 deaths in upper New York State from bootleg liquor, Mr. Roosevelt ordered a special investigation which revealed the supply came from rubbing alcohol and non-freezing ingredients.

He said today that the Treasury had reduced the supply to bootleggers from these two sources, and announced co-operation by the Canadian, Cuban, Mexican and British governments in curbing alcohol smuggling.

The President also said an agreement had been reached for joint control on the Canadian border, the first of its kind in history.

LYNCH PENALTY Demanded Here

Adoption by the Massachusetts Legislature of a memorial to Congress in favor of legislation providing for a penalty for the crime of lynching today was strongly urged before the legislative committee on constitutional law.

Joseph Mitchell, attorney and president of the Roxbury Civic Club, Inc., favored the resolutions. There was no opposition.

God 'Left Out' By Roosevelt, Church Says

Zion's Herald is the weekly organ of the Methodist Church in New England. Sounding a call for a day of national prayer, the editorial said:

"Although there are 60,000,000 church members in the United States, when has Franklin D. Roosevelt issued an earnest and arresting call comparable to Lincoln's Fast Day proclamation, for their help in the present crisis?"

The editorial is supplemented with Lincoln's Fast Day proclamation issued March 30, 1863, during the Civil War crisis. The Zion's Herald stated there now is "no call to prayer from the pen of the President of the United States" and the paper is "impressed with the crying need of such a summons at a time like this."

"Doubtless in his private life he recognizes an unseen power. But we cannot forget that Franklin D. Roosevelt inaugurated his term, not by any provision to quench the spiritual thirst of the American people with the water that springs up into eternal life, but with the unloosing of the liquor evil to rob men and women of their spiritual, intellectual, and physical powers.

"It is not yet too late. Opportunityy, about to leave the doorstep, tarries for the moment. Franklin D. Roosevelt still has a chance to be another Lincoln."

KING Backed by 100 for RETENTION

More than 100 persons, prominent in Boston's business and polites, today went to the State House to praise Police Superintendent Martin H. King and urge that his post go under Civil Service protection.

After about 25 had been heard, Senator Edward C. Carroll of South Boston announced the matter was taken under advisement.

The support was organized to urge the passage of a bill framed by Representative Thomas Dorgan of Dorchester providing for the civil service status of the superintendent.

Representative Thomas Coyne denounced Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard for his attempt to remove King, saying that public opinion had forced him to abandon it. He praised King's efficiency and honesty.

District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex county also praised King and said he would have been remiss in his duty if he had not supported the measure.

BABY Deserted NEAR DEATH

The baby is a boy. He was left with John Miller at 122 Cornwall street, Roslindale by a 20-year-old girl who gave the name Mary Johnson.

Miller said the girl was probably the mother. She gave an address in Boylston street, Jamaica Plain. Police said it was false.

Meanwhile "Baby Johnson" is strangely quiet as he lies in his little crib. He has an abscessed ear, sometimes fatal to infants.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache caused by constipation — you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

I would not have missed this big chance for anything. I don't know if there will ever be another sale like this one. You see, this is my first fur coat—I have never owned anything that my friends have admired so much—yes, even envied so much—and best of all it has the I. J. ## "Sailor Beware" Barred

Wilbur Booking Cancelled

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Another hot potato among the recent New York stage successes, "Sailor, Beware!" will not come to the Wilbur Theter a week from Monday as planned.

Charles Harris, general manager for Courtney Burr, producer of the nautical play that has been considered more naughty than nautical in two cities now (Minneapolis and Boston), was notified last night by telegram that the booking at the Wilbur is off.

George Holland

Mr. Harris, in turn, notified a theater in Brooklyn, th City of Churches, that a tentative booking for next week, which hinged on Boston's acceptance of the play, was off.

These notifications followed a visit by City Censor Herbert McNary to the Wilbur Theater, a telephone call to Herman Mintz, counsel and chairman of the board of the M. and P. theaters, and another phone call to the local theater manager who was representing the New York producer.

Mr. Mintz said: "The booking was arranged only with the understanding that the play must be passed by the authorities."

City Censor McNary said:

"Technically, no play can be banned in Boston. A play can open here and if it violates the statutes the license of the theater can be revoked or suspended."

* * *

So except that in running down the story this column learned that "Point Valaine," Noel Coward's recent play, really precipitated the fuss about "Within the Gates," there is not much more to the story of "Sailor, Beware!"

Mr. McNary's job, by the way, gets no easier. Modest, able and honest and popular with those important taxpayers, the theater interests, the young city censor has done a fine job in the first year of his regime.

Like City Censor John Casey before him, Censor McNary is a bogey-man of New York producers who do not know the facts.

But a board of three, the mayor, the chief justice of the municipal court, and the police commissioner rules the destinies of the local theater.

The city censor is hardly more than an investigator for this board. He is called as a witness at hearings, and his opinion is asked

Henry Herzbrun Replaces Emanuel Cohen

Los Angeles, Feb. 6—Emanuel Cohen, now in New York, yesterday tendered his resignation as vice-president in charge of production for Paramount. The new chief selected for this important post is Henry Herzburn, Paramount attorney and a man thoroughly familiar with the motion picture business.

Mr. Herzbrun's appointment came on the anniversary of his ninth year with Paramount. Very wisely he put the production in the hands of Ernst Lubitsch and made him supervisor of production with absolute authority.

Louella O. Parsons

Another interesting change is the appointment of Albert Kaufman as associate producer. Mr. Kaufman, who has been vice-president in charge of production, asked to be relieved of that responsibility and to assume an associate producer's post.

The appointment of Henry Herzbrun will be a popular one, although Manny Cohen had many fast friends among the stars.

It is good news that Adolph Zukor remains, although this was not accomplished without a bitter fight.

Of all the actresses who have played Anna in that tear-jerker of yesteryear, "Way Down East," Lillian Gish stands out in my mind. How Lil ate up that part! Maybe Janet Gaynor will do the same when it comes to the screen again in May.

The younger generation, which hardly remembers Miss Gish on the screen, and Lottie Blair Parker's play, "Not at All," will have to form their own opinions from Janet's performance. Henry King, who leaves for Honolulu a week from Saturday, with Mrs. King, will study the play while he is resting on the beach at Waikiki. The Fox company bought the rights from W. A. Brady about six months ago at a price said to set a new high for old material.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who, off the record, told some of his pals, when he was leaving, that he didn't care if he ever saw Hollywood again, is coming back. How come, I wonder, when he seemed so perfectly content with Gertrude Lawrence in England. Paramount is bringing young Fairbanks back to our village to play opposite Sylvia Sidney in Vina Delmar's story, "End of the World."

Amusing the way Cesar Romero has built and built and built, until his own studio, Universal, has finally been forced to recognize his ability. You would have thought that Universal would have immediately given him big parts, but no one paid much attention to him until his work was commented on at other studios. It's all going to be different now with Universal buying Eric Hatch's story, "Ten Eleven Fifth," for him. I still say that Romero is the only actor who in any way approaches the late Rudolph Valentino in personality.

* * *

There is real sentiment attached to Eddie Sutherland's acceptance of the direction of "The Great Ziegfeld." When Florenz Ziegfeld was in Hollywood a couple of years ago he asked Eddie to direct "Glorifying the American Girl." Eddie had another job at the time and said, "I can't do that one but I'd like to direct you in the story of your life." Ziegfeld laughed and told William Anthony McGuire what Eddie had said. So McGuire remembered that talk and he has given Eddie one of the most important directorial assignments of the year in "The Great Ziegfeld."

* * *

Line or two—Elizabeth Meehan, known to her pals as Betty Williams, has moved to the Warner Brothers lot. Betty will work with Benny Rubin (yes, I mean the Rubin who used to try to act) on the "Living Up To Lizzie" script, which stars Aline McMahon. Jean Arthur and Columbia are all made up and Jean has just signed another six months' contract. "The Whole Town's Talking," a really good picture, brought them together.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The Chevy Chase House where GARBO once lived and which housed MERLE OBERON and GARY COOPER at different times, is the new home of ALEX WICHFIELD and FIFI WIDENER WICHFIELD; ALEX and FIFI breezed into town from Palm Beach and they will be here for some time; ALICE FAYE, still cra-a-zy about RUDY VALLEE, taking a trip to New York very, very soon; everybody at the Santa Anita track Saturday; RONALD COLMAN, wearing dark glasses, watched the ponies with WARNER BAXTER, GLORIA SWANSON, in for a day from La Quinta, picking a few winners for HERBERT MARSHALL and REGINALD BERKELEY; PAULETTE GODDARD in the biggest, floppiest hat at the track, with CHARLIE CHAPLIN by her side; BING CROSBY, ROBERT MONTGOMERY and dozens of film directors, writers and executives; SYLVIA SIDNEY and NORMAN KRASNA engrossed in each other at VICTOR HUGO'S for dinner. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Too Good To Be True

Ted Healy, minus his stooges, comes into the money in "The Winning Ticket," new screen attraction coming to Loew's Orpheum Friday.

NEW BILLS

Baker Leads New Parade

While Joe Penner and the Boswell Sisters continue to crowd the Keith Memorial, the second big vaudeville show of the Keith Jubilee takes the stage Friday.

Phil Baker, the royal jester of the stage, screen and radio tops the new program, with his old running mate, Harry "Bottles" McNaughton, Beetle, and Mabel Albertson, his inseparable radio companions, featured with him.

The Diamond Brothers, comedy dancers, and Peggy Taylor in "Kitchen Pirates," with Stuart Farrington, Eddie Fenn and Clarence Warner, and the celebrated Salici's Puppets, are other footlight attractions.

On the screen will be "White Lies," with Walter Connolly, Fay Wray, and Victor Jory in the leading roles.

* * *

Tomorrow the new films for the week bring "The Right to Live" to the screens at the Paramount and Fenway. The film has been adapted from W. Somerset Maugham's "The Sacred Flame," and in the leading roles are George Brent, Colin Clive and Josephine Hutchinson.

The accompanying film is "Red Hot Tires."

Dog Show at Arena Holds Spotlight

By BETTY ALDEN

IN SPITE OF FREEZING weather and icy blasts beating upon the window panes, it was dog day in the Arena Lobby yesterday morning when feminine dog fanciers paraded their blue bloods in an informal exhibit staged by members of the Ladies Dog Club . . .

There was many an interesting contrast in canine style and personality as soft fluffy coats and smooth silken furs were combed, brushed or powdered for the first important public appearance of the season . . .

MRS. FRANCIS V. CRANE
and one of her Pyrenees

Most of the older dogs were very blase about posing for photographs but many a vociferous objection was raised by pups less experienced in the world of cameras, flash bulbs and judges . . .

• • •

Old Timers

OLD TIMERS in the public eye are the two gigantic Newfoundland champions which Elizabeth Loring exhibited, and Mrs. Francis V. Crane's snowy white Great Pyrenees, all three calm and unruffled by all the attention they were attracting . . . Mrs. Homer Loring, a corsage of rosy sweet peas brightening her mink coat, assisted her daughter in showing the animals . . .

Showing a healthy interest in the procedure of the exhibit in contrast to shows in his home country, the beautiful white poodle, a European champion, of Mrs. Justin V. Greiss', was the cynosure of all eyes . . .

About the most impudent participants were the tiny papillons of Mrs. DeForest Danielson who dared to yip at Elsa and Seigfried, the majestic Great Danes exhibited by Miss Isabelle Hoopes . . . and the defiant Scottie who posed in true Morgan Dennis style, after his mistress, Mrs. Charles Gray of Needham, refused to let him hold a conversation with a neighboring sheepdog . . .

An international champion, Bobby Burns of Wildoaks, accompanied his mistress, Mrs. Guy Warren Walker, Jr. . . . He is a wire haired fox terrier who has developed a haughty attitude toward everything pertaining to winning ribbons . . .

Nip and Tuck, two wistful black and white cocker spaniels who will try to out-ribbon other entries in their class at the Eastern Dog Club Show on February 21 and 22, tugged at their leashes in a vain hope of escaping from all the noise and confusion . . . Mrs. Alexander Wheeler of Marlborough street owns and exhibited them . . .

Smart Black Ensemble

Attended by the only Norwegian elkhound in the club, Katherine Townsend came to enjoy the informality of the show . . . She refuses to subject her pet to the strain of a long indoor show so Loki, grandson of Vingo, only makes his appearance at summer exhibits or an informal show like yesterday's . . .

Dinners to Precede Premiere

TO SEE HOW "They All Lived Happily," South Shore society will assemble in Loring Hall in Hingham this evening for the world premiere of this play written by a combination of amateur talents which would be hard to beat, Foster Trainer and Mrs. Vincent Rich . . .

The curtain will not rise until 9 o'clock, giving ample time for friends to drive down from Boston for the event . . . In Cohasset and Hingham many prefatory dinners are scheduled, either for tonight or before the Thursday and Friday performances . . .

Mrs. G. P. Marshall

Mr. and Mrs. Trainer will entertain a small company of friends at their home this evening . . . Covers will be laid for Mr. and Mrs. Potter Trainer, Mrs. Edith Noyes, Miss Alice Devais and H. R. Trainer . . .

Tomorrow evening, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon P. Marshall of Hingham will give a dinner at their home . . . Included among their guests will be Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner Coolidge, 2d, Mr. and Mrs. John Chickering, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Vickery, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barnes, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Simonds, Mrs. Charles J. Bullock, Mr. and Mrs. J. Laurence Carrol, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Marshall and Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Catlin, Jr. . . .

Also Mr. and Mrs. Magnus Gregerson, Mr. and Mrs. H. Newton Marshall and Donald Squier . . . Mrs. Marshall is a member of the cast of "They All Lived Happily" which is a musical revue with story, lyrics and music composed with a high degree of originality . . .

Dame Sybil Thorndike, the eminent actress, manager and author, is enjoying a warm and gracious welcome during her stay in Boston as leading lady in "The Distaff Side" . . . In addition to the many entertainments in her honor, she will be feted at a tea at the Junior League on Valentine's Day . . . Mrs. John W. Bartol, whose husband is president of the English Speaking Union, and Mrs. John W. Farley, will be the hostesses on this occasion . . .

POPULAR Smart Set Trio

HAZEL WIGHTMAN LESLIE BRENER HOPE BLANCHARD

A trio of society's younger set snapped as they enjoyed a little chat at a recent social gathering. In the group are Miss Hazel Wightman, Miss Leslie Brener and Miss Hope Blanchard.

Society Notes

MISS JOSEPHINE DEVENEY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Carney Deveney of 11 Benton street, Stoneham, was married on Sunday at 4 p. m. in St. Patrick's Church, Stoneham, to Mr. Richard D. Roche, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Roche, Sr., of 10 Blanchard avenue, Everett.

They were attended by Elizabeth Deveney as bridesmaid and Kenneth E. Hannon of Medford as best man.

• • •

MAJOR H. JAY DUFFIN, on the staff of Governor James M. Curley, and Mrs. Duffin of Lenox, are now in Bermuda at The Castle Harbour. They attended the Fete of "Apple Blossoms" Tuesday in the French restaurant of the hotel.

Miss Shea to Wed

Lexington Girl Plans New York Bridal

A WEDDING of importance will take place on Monday in New York City when Miss Eleanor Blanard Shea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Shea of Lexington, becomes the bride of Mr. Earl Palmer Williams of Washington, D. C., at a morning ceremony in St. Vincent's Church.

Miss Barbara Viano of Somerville will leave the end of the week to be her cousin's maid of honor and Mr. Bert Geasey of New York will be best man for Mr. Williams. Mr. Shea will give his daughter in marriage.

A whirl of parties has been given in Miss Shea's honor for the past few weeks, which ended on Saturday with a large gathering of friends and members of the bridal party at the home of Miss Viano on Dover street, Somerville.

About 50 guests attended. Mrs. Raymond Rambach and Mrs. Edward Murphy poured at the tea table and included among the guests were Mrs. Stephen Higgins of Beacon street, Miss Mary McAnarney of Quincy, and Mrs. John Cronin of Beacon Hill.

After a wedding trip, the young couple will reside on Memorial Drive in Cambridge.

• • •

Class Dance

The annual mid-winter prom of the senior class of the Teachers College of Boston will be held Friday, February 8, at the University Club.

Louise T. Bailey of Dorchester is chairman, assisted by the following committee: The Misses Marie Bannister, Catherine Conroy, Mary Doherty, Sarah Levenson and Gertrude Morrissey.

The class officers: Anne Kelley, president; Helen Cushing, vice-president; Margaret Donovan, secretary; Ann Mulholland, treasurer, will receive with the committee members.

The patrons will be Dr. and Mrs. William H. J. Kennedy, Dean William F. Linehan, Miss Margaret M. Sallaway, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Gillis and Miss Frances G. Keyes.

Debutante Silhouettes

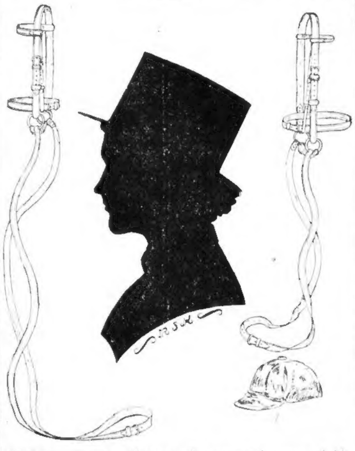
NUMBER NINE



YOU should need no hints as to the name of the owner of this familiar profile, but we might mention that she made her debut at a tea dance at the Algonquin Club last winter, attended Beaver Country Day and is now attending the Erskine school.

She lives in Cohasset with her family which is famous in equine circles.

Do you know her now?

Mademoiselle, of the top-hat, if you would care to have the original drawing of your silhouette, it is yours for the asking.

• • •

ALTHOUGH the debutantes we have profiled seem to have no trouble in recognizing themselves, many readers are not so sure, and have requested that we mention the names of each girl after the silhouette has been printed. So hereafter, each day we run a silhouette we will mention the name of the girl in the preceding one.

Jane Bogardus is the owner of the profile which appeared on Monday's Boston American society page.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX GIVES ADVICE ON LOVE

How to Get Married on Limited Means

MANY young people have written to this column since reading the series, "Why Don't You Get Married?" saying nothing would please them better if they could afford it.

Can't you afford to marry? I wonder—let's stop and consider. Girls like the one who wrote me the other day saying she had never put her hands in dish water, can't afford to marry, certainly.

It seems her mother didn't want her to do anything around the house, imagining if her daughter knew nothing of housework she would adorn one of the well-paying professions.

If young men who have written me have in mind girls like this, they'll do well to hesitate.

And if girls who have sent to this column similar letters have in mind young men who have been unemployed for several years, who have no trade, job or ability to earn money, they, too, would do well to consider.

Why don't these young people, both boys and girls, turn over a new leaf.

Let girls remember that home economic classes have demonstrated, in their free cooking "clinics," that families of four can live comfortably on seven or eight dollars a week and have appetizing and well-balanced meals.

This, of course, cannot be done if a girl has had a foolish mother who imagines she can launch her in a lucrative profession by the simple plan of not letting her know how to boil a potato or make a good cup of coffee.

Dainty Frock

Dressy, Yet Simple

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9247

Two little yoke sections which top bits of shirring and appear to fasten on with three buttons.

There are cunning panties included in the pattern—frock and panties may be made in any dainty material which will ease into shirring without complaint; one of the new prints which little folk enjoy deciphering, or a solid color material of not too striking hue.

Pattern 9247 may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 6 requires 2½ yards 36-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Bride and Brooms

Sparkling Smile

Star Tells How to Have One

By JULIET SHELBY

IF YOU SAW Joan Crawford in "Forsaking All Others" you can well realize what an asset her smile is to her career!

You are fascinated by her lovely smile—her radiant, sparkling smile. That alone has endeared her to thousands of movie fans.

Naturally, being a beauty editor, I couldn't resist asking her pointblank what kind of a toothbrush she used. She laughed and said, "Heavens! Can't I keep one little beauty secret to myself? Who on earth would be interested in knowing what kind of toothbrush I use?"

But after splendid recommendation, you can bet I ordered one. A glance at her lovely teeth convinced me that all my readers would be interested in knowing what kind of brush Joan Crawford used! And what a grand brush it is — one that does tricks. The bristles may be adjusted to reach and clean all surfaces of the teeth, and they come in medium, hard and extra-hard unbleached refills. The handle will last you a lifetime and it is one toothbrush that is fun to use. When you have finished scrubbing, you just know your teeth are immaculately clean.

If you wish to know the name of this toothbrush and where it is sold, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American. If you prefer phoning, call Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000.

SLENDERIZE ANKLES

Questions: I have large, thick ankles and they cause me much embarrassment. I have been told that they can be made slender by surgery. Do you know whether this is true? If so, can you advise me who to see about having an operation of this kind performed?

Mrs. Barbara H., No. Adams.

Answer. When ankles are thick because of large bones, there's not very much to be done about them. One can find out easily enough by picking up the flesh, and observing whether it is a thick or a thin layer. If there are fatty cushions, walk tip toe for five minutes a day. Do high kicking exercises. Cover the skin surface with a heavy massage cream, form the fingers into a bracelet and rub around and around with heavy pressure. Smooth from the foot upward with flattened palms. I also have a set of leg and ankle slenderizing exercises which you may have by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American.

"They Say" About Love...

MISS SHIRLEY HOWARD, contralto, says:

"With rare exceptions, women love more sincerely and more deeply than men. In my opinion, women, because of their maternal instinct, are infinitely more unselfish and self-sacrificing than men.

SOMETHING LOVELY FOR EACH NOOK

"PLANT SOMETHING!" has become almost a national slogan. And this is the time to put your thought forward for your planting.

The wise gardener knows it pays to start early, in order to have time to plan and choose. Especially to choose. For—while it is true that Nature hates a bare spot—she will help you cover it only with something adapted to growth in that particular place.

So take stock of your own soil and climate and the plants that have grown there successfully. Every spot will grow something!

For example, even in the shadow of elevated railroads or in the grime and smoke of factory and mining towns, it is still possible to grow ailanthus, privet, iris daisies, kochia, four-o'clock and Japanese hop. For garden space that is particularly hot and dry, it is best to specialize in such plants as yucca, iris and cacti. In a garden that is damp and shady—ferns, astilbe and woodland flowers are the best ventures. These may be grouped so as to afford considerable garden charm. In fact, the graceful nook shown in our sketch above could be made almost anywhere—an ailanthus tree and a simple cement pool.

Pools may be in any part of the garden. Wherever they are they need goldfish to prevent mosquitos from breeding. Those in shady places may be planted with regal fern, umbrella plant and the plants used in fish aquaria. Those in sun may be filled with water-lilies.

Wouldn't it be a comfort to you in your garden exploits to have the advice of an experienced gardener on what to plant, and how and when? Our booklet, GARDENING MADE EASY, is an excellent guide.

To order GARDENING MADE EASY, write plainly your name, address, and name of booklet and send 15c in coin or stamps (coin preferred) to Boston Evening American, HOME INSTITUTE, 109 West 18th Street, New York, N. Y.

Bridge Rule to Be Broken

By Josephine Culbertson

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Many players do not realize that opening the top card of partner's bid suit when leading against an adverse contract, is often a losing procedure when the hand contains no other entry.

This is particularly bad when the dummy has mentioned notrump at some time during the auction.

The lead may establish a trick for declarer and afford him a quick discard.

East, dealer.

North:
♠ J 7 3
♡ K 10 6 2
♢ K 8 5
♣ 10 6 4

West:
♠ 6 2
♡ 9 8 5
♢ A 6 2
♣ Q J 9 8 5

East:
♠ 8 4
♡ A 7 3
♢ Q J 10 9 7 3
♣ A 3

South:
♠ A K Q 10 9 5
♡ Q J 4
♢ 3
♣ K 7 2

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♢ | 2 ♠ (1) | Pass | 2 N T (2) |
| Pass | 3 ♠ (3) | Pass | 4 ♠ |
| Pass | Pass | Pass | |

(1) A trifle short of the strength required for this bid which is now used to invite a light raise from partner.

(2) With two Kings, North must make some response; 3 spades would have been better.

(3) South is not pleased to hear that some of North's strength is in the diamond suit. With honors scattered through the heart and club suits, there might be a good play for the game.

West considered his cards very carefully before making the opening lead. Bearing in mind North's notrump bid and his own lack of entries, he chose the Club Queen at his opening lead.

East won with the Ace and returned the suit and declarer became helpless. Whenever East got in with the Heart Ace he would return the diamond for his partner to cash the Club.

Had West woodenly opened the Diamond Ace, declarer would place East with the other two Aces for his vulnerable opening bid and would discard a Club on the Diamond King before allowing the opponents to establish the club suit.

Any opening lead other than the one West chose would have permitted declarer to make the contract since the long heart suit in dummy was available for a discard.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

Sharlene Is Painted by Stuart

CHAPTER 21

Sharlene decided to treat this as sensibly as she had the money complex. She moved into the moonlight and stood looking down at him with a shadowy smile. Still he did not hear her.

Then she turned and lifted her hand to the curtain, stretching up on tiptoe, not quite reaching it.

Stuart sat up suddenly and saw her there. "Hold it!" he whispered. "Don't move!"

He was feeling in the drawer of the table for pencil and drawing paper. Startled, she had dropped her arm at his first word and turned to him in bewilderment. Then at his look of disappointed she understood.

"Oh, I see—you want to draw me. I'll do it again." She reached for the curtain and held the pose, laughing at herself silently.

Pale With Love

Stuart threw down his pencil abruptly and sighed. " I didn't get it—the elusive mystery of a moonbeam—" He jumped suddenly to his feet and came to her, gathering her into his arms. "Sharlene—loveliest!"

His lips found hers. She hadn't been mistaken after all! She clung to him and found she liked his eager embrace . . .

* * *

In the morning, when she struggled up from profound depths of sleep, Sharlene did not remember Stuart at first. She was so filled, so saturated with dreams of Kent Damerell. Kent's face, smiling, pleading, adoring, pale with love, had hovered over all night.

She awoke to a surge of great happiness, such as she had not known for weeks. She lay for a moment dazed with pure joy, soaking in it, sinking into it with all her being—gratefully, humbly.

Then came the inevitable awakening. The shock, the disappointment, the old pain creeping back. Intolerable, crushing, stifling! She flung out her arms and cried aloud.

"Stuart!" She turned her head remorsefully, but her husband's head was not on the other pillow . . . Dear Stuart . . . Dear, blessed, tender Stuart . . . What infinite sweetness and tenderness!

An hour later, quiet, self-possessed, dressed for their ride, she sought him down on the beach. She found him lying, face down, on the sand. He lay very still, but there was something forlorn in his pose.

Sharlene moved away some little distance. Then she called out, trying to sound casual: "Oh, Stuart! Where are you?"

That gave him time to collect himself. He rose quickly from the sand and went to meet her. He looked at her anxiously. She did not meet his eyes, but she squeezed his hand frantically. That was reassuring.

"I forgot to tell you—we're riding with the Army at ten. You'll have to hurry to dress."

"Oh, all right. You're ready, aren't you?" She stood in her jodhpurs—slender, gallant, young. She met his eyes bravely at last, and there was only tenderness there.

"Wh-what?"

"Please, dear. It would mean so much to you. This mystic quality of yours will gain by contact with that ancient culture. Great works will come of it—"

"Do you care, Sharlene—about the great works?" He smiled whimsically at her.

"Of course I do! But I'll be honest about this—I want to run away again."

"Do you still want me—to run with you, Sharlene?"

"Yes, yes!" She clung to his hand. "I need you so, Stuart!"

"All right. We'll run just as far and as fast as you want to. And now I reckon I'd better get ready for the Army."

Color on Canvas

As Stuart hurried toward the hotel, he came upon Forrester already at work, absorbed in transferring to his canvas the pearly morning light across the jade sea.

"Hello!" Stuart stopped short, his fingers itching, longing for the feel of the brushes. The old man looked up briefly and grunted, then went on working.

"I hear you married a rich wife, Pennington."

"Yes."

There was a long pause, while Forrester smeared color across his canvas.

"What are you going to do next?"

"We—we're going to the Orient."

"I see . . . Well, I'll bet right now that you'll never do another honest stroke on canvas."

The flight of Sharlene and Stuart over Asia was like the restless darting of humming-birds. Never stopping for more than a sip of that ancient culture Sharlene had held out to Stuart as a lure.

They had been inordinately lucky in incurring the favor of the Maharana of Udaipur, the "Sun of the Hindus," to whom they came with letters of introduction from a high British official.

His Highness was just sending an expedition into the Aravalli Hills. His immense entourage—including camels carrying tents, and elephants and Arabian horses carrying courtiers—was ready.

He turned to Sharlene and saw the tragic hurt underlying the brave brightness of her spirit. His heart warmed to them both.

"I should like you to see the marble dams," he said. "They are for eyes like yours to see. Particularly Jai Samand. Jai Singh built it almost three centuries ago. It is the loveliness of a dream caught and hardened into marble."

Stuart and Sharlene were enchanted. Rarely was this privilege accorded to outsiders.

His Highness smiled at their enthusiasm. "You would like to ride and elephant, Mrs. Pennington?" He clapped his hands softly and a servant came running to receive his orders. Then he turned back to Sharlene: "I have sent also for a veil for you to wear against our hot Indian sun and dust."

Dream of Beauty

"I have given orders," their host told them, "to have you go alone up to the Wind Palace, on the crest of the mountain above the lake. There you will see the moon rise. You will think," and he smiled softly, "that you have never seen her full glory before."

That evening Stuart and Sharlene rode up the tortuous path to the Wind Palace alone. They had the old seraglio to themselves, and mounted to the roof court where they looked out on the lake through lace arches of white marble.

"Talk to me, Stuart," she begged. "It's all so—so lonesome!"

"It isn't lonesome," he reassured her. "Jai Singh built this place for love—as well as to study the stars. Can't you see him lying here at his ease, studying astronomy, while his ladies made soft music?"

He lay down beside her and picked out the constellations one by one. A soft wind began to sigh through the delicate marble arches

February PARTY Salads

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

IF YOU did not attend the unusual offering at the Opera House on Monday, you missed great opportunity to find out how we all with very little expense can live like millionaires.

And living like millionaires did not mean being burdened down with diamonds and jewels, but freedom from drudgery. It means having the modern conveniences that make everyday living happy and pleasant for the housewife.

The last act of the play cast a glimpse into the future of 1968. It showed the man as the homemaker and the woman as the wage-earner. On the surface this might seem very amusing, but let me assure you that the man kept house in a home that was outfitted with the most modern conveniences, showing that be seeks the better things of life.

Miss Betty Appel, the charming hostess of the occasion, said there are many ways in which the refrigerator can help the modern woman in her homemaking—not only to save pennies, but also to help in the easy preparation of foods. Here are two salads to play an important part in your February parties.

CHERRY SALAD

1½ tablespoons granulated gelatine
1 cup orange juice
1 cup sugar
Shelled pecans
Cream mayonnaise
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Lettuce

Strain the juice from the cherries (there should be one cupful), add the sugar and let come to a boil. In the meantime, soak the gelatine in the orange and lemon juices combined for five minutes; pit the cherries, replacing the stones with halves of pecan meats. Add the gelatine to the syrup, put the stuffed cherries into six individual molds, pour the syrup over while hot, and when stiff serve on lettuce with cream mayonnaise. Serves 6.

PLEASE..
FOR GOD'S SAKE,
GIVE ME A BREAK

This letter introduces Cynthia Carson, poignantly charming heroine of Vina Delmar's flaming new novel now beginning in Liberty—her adventures in Hollywood will carry you from pinnacle to pinnacle of breath-taking suspense.

Dear Ray:

Your messenger just arrived and I am good and sore. In the first place it is none of your business if Bruce MacDougal is coming here for dinner this evening.

I know who he is and I know my lowly position. The caste system of India hasn't got this beat one bit. I'm nobody and that makes me an untouchable in Hollywood. Also you think Bruce MacDougal is romping around because I look like just another telephone number. Ray, let me have an evening of peace and quiet with a man who isn't on the make. I'm sorry if that hurts you, but let's be honest with each other.

Look, you have your home and your little girl and your movie empire and I haven't a thing. Give me a break. You wouldn't talk about me, would you, Ray? You wouldn't say to anybody "Oh, Cynthia Carson" in that tone that a man uses when he wants to spill the beans and still be able to claim that he never kissed and told. Give me a break, Ray. And I'm not asking you to lie. I'm just asking you to keep quiet. Please, for God's sake, give me a break.

Yours,
Cynthia.

Given in Marriage

CHAPTER 261

"I AM SORRY to disturb you," my father said, as at his summons Lillian threw open the nursery door and ushered him in, "but it is necessary that we run over these astounding events of tonight and determine what is best to be done. No," as Lillian started to close the door again—"leave it open. Harry will be along presently, and, as the football boys say, we'll go into a huddle."

"It seems to me that you already have been in one," Lillian said audaciously. "At least the sounds that floated in to us indicated some kind of rumpus was on."

"Ah, yes!" my father replied. " Of course you could not help but hear. A sad affair; all the more sorrowful because it is so hard to understand."

A firm, heavy tread sounded outside the door, and the next instant Harry Underwood came through the doorway.

"He's quiet now," he volunteered. "The paroxysms seem to be over, though he's weak, of course. But I think he'll sleep for a while. I hope so, at any rate. What do you think, Chief, about getting Hugh back here?"

"I'm afraid that rests with my daughter," he said. "She left her husband at the hospital upon the understanding that Hugh would stay there and guard him. Unless she releases Hugh from that promise, I doubt that he would leave Richard, even to come here."

"Let me get this clearly!!' I spoke quickly, nervously. "Do you mean that you wish me to decide whether Hugh is to remain at the hospital with Dicky, or is to come over here at Lee Chow's call?

"I cannot wait to explain everything to you now," my father said. "Will it suffice if I tell you that, with Lee Chow safely bound in the other room, Harry can guard Richard as well as Hugh can? It was because Hugh feared that Lee Chow might succeed in getting into Richard's room at the hospital that he insisted upon staying with Richard tonight.

"Under those circumstances," I interrupted steadily, "there of course can be but one answer. Hugh must leave Dicky and come here. Tell him, Harry, that if he feels bound by any promise to me, which I doubt, I release him from it now and wish him to leave you with Dicky while he comes over here."

"That is what I expected you to say," he said. "Harry, will you start at once? You can drive Hugh's car back, can you not? Then it will be there for him to drive here."

Love Letters of Napoleon

Blind to Wiles of Josephine

HE WAS LIKE A SCHOOLBOY IN HER HANDS

By HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON

Author of "The Story of Mankind," "The Story of the Bible," and Who Has Spent the Last Five Years Making an Intimate Study of the Napoleonic Period.

A charming portrait of Josephine, made in 1798, two years after she married Napoleon. This is from a minature by Isabey.

For a moment Josephine seemed impressed by the last of the letters from Napoleon we printed yesterday. But she was not the sort of person to worry very long.

And once more she found excuses for her delay—her delicate condition—let Napoleon ask his brothers and sisters or General Murat how sick she really was, and how much she had now come to depend upon her dear, darling children and how sweet her little daughter was to dear mamma now that dear mamma was suffering such terrible douleurs.

And the great man, who could have brought her to his tent by merely writing: "Go to the devil and I shall never send you another sou either," behaved like a pathetic little schoolboy who has fallen for a movie queen he has never seen.

"Away From You!"

General Headquarters at Tortone, 26 Prairial, Year IV of the Republic, one and indivisible (June 16), 1796.

Since the 18, my dear Josephine, I've been hoping for you and I thought you'd arrived at Milan. As soon as I'd left the battlefield at Borghetto, I ran there to look for you; I did not find you there!

Several days after, a messenger informed me that you hadn't left, and he brought me no letters from you. My spirits were broken with sorrow. I thought I'd been abandoned by everything that interested me on earth.

Drowned by sorrow, I'm perhaps writing you too forcibly. If my letters hurt you, then consider me forever inconsolable . . . The Tessin having overflowed, I went to Tortone to wait for you; every day I waited to no purpose.

Finally, four hours ago, I was there again. It was to see the bare words that told me you weren't coming.

An instant afterward, I won't try to describe to you my profound distress. I learned that you were ill, that you have three doctors in attendance, that you are in danger, that you aren't writing me.

From that moment, I've been in a state that nothing can describe. You'd have to have my heart to love me as I love you!

You are suffering and I am far from you! Perhaps you are gone! Life itself is something to be held in contempt; but my saddened reasoning makes me fear that I will not find you again after death, and I can't accustom myself to the idea of never seeing you again.

The day that I learn that Josephine is no more I'll cease to live. Men are so contemptible! You alone lessen for my eyes the shame of human character.

"Come to Me,

For Just One Hour"

First I must ask you to pardon the mad, insane letters that I've written you. My dear, give every thought to your health; sacrifice everything to getting rested up.

You are delicate, feeble and ill, and it's the hot season; the trip is long. I beg you, on my knees, don't risk a life so dear.

However short life may be, three months will pass. Three months without seeing each other! . . . I tremble, my dear, I don't dare think of the future.

I don't believe in the immortality of the soul. If you die, I'll die at once, but the death of the hopeless, of the exhausted.

You fight between illness and doctors far from him who should tear you from illness, and even from the arms of death . . .

If your illness continues, get me permission to come to see you for an hour. In five days I'd be in Paris, and the twelfth I'd be with my army. Let those who will, love glory; those who will, serve their country. My spirits are suffocating in this exile, and when my sweetheart suffers, is ill, I cannot coldly calculate victory.

Sorrow for His

"Sick Darling"

Have pity, have someone write me; I want to know what kind of illness you have and what there is to fear.

Here are a million kisses; believe me that nothing equals my love, which is going to endure all my life! Think of me, write me twice a day.

Lift me quickly from the pain that is consuming me. Come quickly, but take care of your health. B.

General Headquarters, Tortone, noon, 27 Prairial, Year IV of the Republic, one and indivisible, Bonaparte, General in Chief of the Army of Italy, to Josephine:

My life is a perpetual nightmare. A horrible presentiment keeps me from breathing. I'm no longer alive; I've lost more than life, more than happiness, more than rest; I am nearly without hope.

I'm sending you a messenger. He will stay only four hours in Paris and then bring me your answer. Write me ten pages; that alone can console me a little.

You are sick, you love me, I haven't been nice to you, you're having a child and I can't see you.

Pardon me, my sweetheart, the love with which you have inspired me has robbed me of reason; I've lost it forever. My misgivings are so dreadful that I'm all for seeing you, for holding you two hours against my heart, so to die together.

As for me, no consolation, no rest, no hope, until the messenger I've sent your returns and a long letter tells me what your illness is and to what extent it ought to be . . . (illegible)

If it's dangerous I warn you that I'll leave at once for Paris. My arrival will conquer the illness. I've always had luck; fate has never resisted my will, and today I'm hit in my weakest point.

Josephine, how can you go without writing me so long? Your last letter was the third of the month; I've kept it, however, right in my pocket. Your picture and your letters are constantly before my eyes.

"How Did I Live

Before I Met You?"

I cannot do anything without you. I can't understand how I lived without knowing you. Ah! Josephine, if you had understood my heart, would you have stayed from the 29 to the 16 (18 May to 4 June) without leaving?

I suspect everyone. I'm mad at everyone around you. I calculated that you left and that you'd arrived at Milan the 15.

All my thoughts are centered in your dressing room, in your bed, on your heart. Your illness, that's what concerns me, night and day.

In your letter, my sweetheart, be sure to tell me that you are convinced that I love you beyond what it is possible to imagine; that you are persuaded that my every moment is consecrated to you; that never an hour passes without my thinking of you; that the idea of thinking of another woman never comes into my head; that every one of them, so far as I'm concerned, is without grace, without beauty, without wit; that you, that all of you just as I see you, just as you are, is sufficient for me and occupies all the place in my heart; that my heart has no secrets that you do not see, no thoughts that are not concerned with you, that my powers, my arms, my intelligence are devoted to your service; that my soul is in your body, and that the day you change or cease to live will be the day of my death; that Nature, the earth are beautiful in my eyes because you are a part of them.

You know that never will I be able to permit you to have a lover; much less offer you one. The sight of you with one and the tearing apart of my heart would occur at the same moment; and then, if I could not put my hand on your sacred person . . .

No, I should never dare; but I should abandon life where I had mistakenly believed in a great virtue. But I'm sure and proud of your love.

A child as adorable as its mother is going to be born and be able to pass several years in your arms. Unhappy that I am! I'd be content with a day.

Adorable woman, whence your power? I am really ill with the same illness as you. I've still a burning fever . . . Don't keep Le Simple waiting more than six hours, and see that he returns immediately bringing me the darling letter of my queen.

Do you remember the dream where I took off your slippers, your chiffons and made you enter completely into my heart? Why hasn't Nature arranged all this like that? There are so many things to do.

B . . .

(26 June, 1796.)

For a month I've received from my sweetheart only two letters of three lines each. Has she lots to do?

The business of writing to her sweetheart isn't it sufficiently important for her? That said, what about thinking of him? . . . To live without thinking of Josephine, that would be death and doesn't exist.

"I Only Love You

All the More"

Good God! Tell me, you who know so well how to make others love without loving yourself, do you know how one can cure oneself of love? I'll pay high for that remedy.

You should have left the 5 Prairial; stupid as I was, I expected you the 13. As if a pretty woman could give up her habits her friends, her Madame Tallien, and a dinner at Barras', and a new show at the theatre and Fortune, yes, Fortune (Josephine's dog)?

You love everything more than your husband; you only feel a slight esteem for him, and some of that kindness in which the heart abounds.

Finally, my incomparable little mother, I'm going to tell you my secret: laugh at me, stay in Paris, have several lovers, let everyone know it, never write, eh, well! as a result I'll love you ten times more.

If this isn't madness, fever delirium? And I won't be cured of this (or, yes, my God, I will be cured); but don't tell me that you are sick; don't try to justify yourself.

Good God! You're pardoned; I love you madly, and never my poor heart will cease to give its love. If you didn't love me, my lot would be pretty bizarre.

We've made peace with Rome, which is giving us some money. We'll be at Leghorn tomorrow, and, the quickest I can, into your arms, at your feet, your bosom.

B. . . .

MOONEY APPEAL

In Court Again

Washington, Feb. 6—Tom Mooney's attorneys knocked at the doors of the Supreme Court again to gain his release from San Quentin penitentiary in California.

Defeated two weeks ago, when the court refused to entertain their petitions for hearing on a habeas corpus writ, Mooney's lawyers asked the court to reconsider.

CCC WOODSMAN

Dies of Injury

Great Barrington, Feb. 6—Albert J. Biscoinet, 23-year-old CCC worker of Worcester, died today of injury suffered in an accident while cutting trees in the woods near here.

The youth's skul was fractured yesterday when a tree he was sawing broke off and the butt struck him on the head.

FANS IN TOWN HALL TURMOIL

By N. F. T.

What's a famous funny fellow to do when loudspeaker patrons by the thousands start suggesting how he should conduct his comedy hour on the air? One in particular is admittedly wondering, if not actually worrying.

In no uncertain terms the "Town Hall Tonight" followers file their obdurate written objections, along with some rather rambling recommendations.

"N. F. T."

Thus and so, Fred Allen figures his automatic applause machine may not be quite the best means of deciding upon the most gifted of his amateur artists. However, until a more fool-proof fashion is designed, the present mechanical system will stand (WEEI) as additional aspirants march to his "mike" and make bids for big time recognition. Smiling in his best laugh-clown laugh manner, as well as in the face of his coast-to-coast critics, Allen again airs his hilarious antics between 9 and 10 o'clock this evening.

GRAND GESTURE

New York and distant points North East, South and West are still talking about how Helen Hayes substituted for suddenly stricken Margaret Sullavan, during the featured hour of drama last Sunday afternoon. It was a last minute happening, or a zero hour emergency, to be exact.

Helen Hayes was notified at her home in Nyack, N. Y., shortly after 1 o'clock. The program was slated for 2:30 to 3:30 performances, with "Peg O' My Heart" the presentation. Naturally, no rehearsal was possible. Not even one complete reading of the part, since 45 minutes of fast driving was necessary.

Fine spirit for one famous actress to display on behalf of another equally celebrated dramatic artist. Of such solid substance are the characters of real troupers made.

It would be Gracie Allen who figures that libraries have been lending books to people just about long enough. Gracie therefore chooses to lend a library (WNAC) one of her prized volumes. Part of the 9:30 to 10 o'clock Burns and Allen buffoonery this evening.

Mary Pickford comes to the air audience (WEEI) tonight, with a radio adaption of Channing Pollack's well-remembered play "The Sign On the Door" and 8 o'clock is the hour.

Radio Questions, Answers

Q.—"Can you tell me if the 'Corn Cob Pipe Club' is still on the air, and where and what time?

Mae C., of New London.

A.—That program was suspended some weeks ago and is not at present in the schedules. It originated at Richmond, Virginia.

E. L. F., of Everett.

Q—Is Fred Langenheim still announcing on the air? Also what is Jimmie Gallagher doing?

Alice, of Back Bay.

A—Fred is now a WCAU staff member in Philadelphia and you may hear him regularly with Boake Carter, the commentator. No word is at hand concerning Jimmie Gallagher.

Q—Is "Bayard Keene" a true personage off the air? A friend told me the detective of radio was once an inspector of police, now retired..

Lillian, of Chelsea.

A—So far is is known, the character is purely a fictional one, and Knox Manning, the Yankee Network staff member, plays the role.

Q—Could you inform us as to what has become of "Hank Keene and his Gang" who were WBZ-WBZA favorites not long, ago?

J. P. R. of Dorchester.

A—Advice reaches the editor that Hank has entered upon a schedule at the KDKA studios in Pittsburgh, where he is doing exceptionally well. The KDKA programs come through on 980 kilocycles and Hank is on every day at noon.

A. B. C. of Boston.

A—Hard to answer, except to say that Al is said to be holding out for bigger money than prospects appear willing to pay for his services.

Q—Are the two chaps "Pic and Pat" the same as the "Mollasses and January" pair? If so, who are they? T. L. H., of Hyde Park.

A—Yes, the same fellows. They are "Pic" Malone and "Pat" Padgett, formerly well known on the vaudeville stage for blackface comedy work.

Q—Does the Greek dilect artist George Givot plan coming back, or will Harry (Nick Parkyakakas) Einstein have that field to himself henceforth?

Competition, of Cambridge.

A—George has been filling vaudeville dates, but is having some snappy material prepared right now, looking toward his early return to a network place. There is keen rivalry between the two. In fact there's downright bitterness.

Grows Despite GAIN IN JOBS

By International News Service

Washington, Feb. 6—In spite of a slight gain in employment in December, the number of persons on relief is increasing, the American Federation of Labor said today in its monthly survey.

Although employment will probably increase further this spring, there is no prospect that industrial gains will be enough to employ more than a small portion of the 11,329,000 now without work, the survey said.

Trade union reports for the first part of January indicate that improvement in employment is probably continuing.

Gains in employment in theaters, railroads and manufacturing, not usual at this time of year, reduced unemployment.

This Is Life
by
ROBERT E. ROGERS

In a very courteous and kindly letter from one, Jean Miller of the class of 1929, Boston University, I am taken to task for my recent opinion that witnesses, presumably Hauptmann in particular, are being unfairly treated on the witness stand.

The writer says in part:

"But did you really mean that Mr. Wilentz has actually been discourteous to Hauptmann? Do something for me? See the new motion picture shots this week at all theaters and then let me know, please, if it isn't Hauptmann who is discourteous and if Attorney-General Wilentz is not absolutely generous with him?

Robert E. Rogers

"To my mind that motion picture showing of Hauptmann shows him as no columnist's comments has done heretofore, as a guilty animal at bay, ready and strong enough to do anything to save his guilty neck. An innocent man would neither have the courage nor strength nor the inclination to be so callous."

The implications in this letter are very interesting. If I remember my own article correctly, I said nothing about the presumed innocence or guilt of the defendant or of his witnesses.

I complained entirely on the basis of the stenographic record, as it appeared in the newspapers, that, regardless of the presumption of guilt or innocence, the prosecuting attorney was carrying the familiar American tactics of bullying a witness altogether too far.

Since that column was published the distinctly contemptuous treatment by the attorney-general of the defense's witnesses has not, certainly, weakened my case.

Legal Third Degree

The writer's position boils down to this, that if a defendant is presumably guilty, that justifies any treatment he may have to submit to from the prosecution.

In that matter he has no redress. He has to sit and take it, unless his own attorney can protect him.

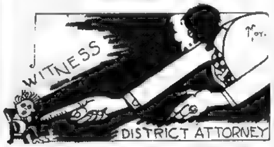
The technic of bullying is the last remnant in our courts of the old method of torture and inquisition.

It is the legal equivalent of the police third degree.

I happen to believe that the truth may be elicited without such tactics.

Much of it is pure showmanship for the newspapers, more of it, to impress the jury with conclusions not always justified by the evidence.

I have not seen the illegal films referred to. If I did, I should want to be very careful about drawing any conclusions from such purely a priori reasoning as the writer seems to believe in.



It would seem to me like an eager attempt to find evidence to back up an already firmly fixed idea.

Such instances as my correspondent adduces are not evidence in the slightest degree.

Two persons of the same intelligence, the same powers of observation, but differing emotional attitudes, might come to absolutely opposite conclusions.

Opposite Conclusions

That, by the way, is what a jury is for. In a jury of twelve purely emotional a priori reasoning both for and against will cancel out—or should cancel out—and the valid conclusion will be reached by that minority of the jury which is able to reach its decisions on the evidence alone.

It is true that Huptmann's behavior offers some interesting grounds for speculation. It is true that his witnesses seem a rather sorry and, in some cases, suspicious lot.

Some of the coincidences seem almost too good to be true. But no matter how convinced people may be of the man's guilt or innocence, the fundamental principles must still hold good.

It is the business of the attorney-general to elicit the truth, not by bullying, not by exhibitions of contempt designed to sway the minds of the jury, but by intensive, intellectual cross-examination. And it is the business of the jury to weigh the evidence as evidence, without allowing any notions of what the defendant's behavior on the witness stand may mean to bias it.

That is, of course, impossible, but it is the ideal.

A human being is an extraordinarily complex mechanism and not always in control of himself. You could hang any number of innocent persons just on your personal impression of his behavior.

Twin Vandals, Fire and Ice, Invaders!

Destruction! Ruin! A bill of $75,000 to pay for damage done in a few brief hours. But flames and frost, vandals that they are, have wrought a weirdly beautiful scene in the interior of Medford's 63-year-old First Baptist church. Great clusters of icicles droop from the lofty rafters. Chandeliers glitter with frozen crystals more elaborate than any work of human artisans. Pews where generations of worshipers sat s[illegible] are now draped with [illegible] as if to be ready for the coming of King Boreas, himself, with an ermined retinue. Smoke-blacked walls are effective background for the picture, illuminated by winter sunshine through wrecked windows. ## MEDFORD LOSS $75,000

Only the quivering skeleton of an 80-foot steeple and the four fire-scarred walls of the First Baptist Church on Oakland street, Medford Center, were left today after a general alarm blaze raged through it for hours.

The building, 63 years old, one of the oldest churches north of Boston and a Medford landmark, was a total loss, police said. Damage was estimated at $75,000.

Firemen fighting in near-zero temperatures, were bowled over time and again by thick, black smoke from the aged ship's timbers of which the church was built. Gas masks had to be used finally.

Section Menaced

The entire Medford Center residential section was threatened. Neighbors got out of their beds to try and salvage church valuables, but in vain. Ralph I. [illegible]dall, principal of the Medford High School, was one of these.

The Rev. C. Harry Atkinson, pastor of the church, risked his life in several forays into the edifice at the start of the fire, but [illegible] were in vain too.

Help had to be called from Arlington, Malden and Somerville.

The fire, the cause of which is under investigation today, apparently started in the 2-story united parish hall about 1 o'clock, police said. This building was completely destroyed.

The loss is covered by insurance up to $60,000.

The parishioners were offered quarters for services by the Mystic Congregational Church, First [illegible] Church, [illegible] Church and Grace Episcopal Church.

The trustees, who will meet this evening, [illegible] new church [illegible].

3 Vote Against Goodwin; Ryan Blames 'Politics'

Governor Curley had the support of all except three members of the executive council today in balloting that made Frank A. Goodwin state registrar of motor vehicles.

Voting against confirmation were three Republican councillors, Joseph B. Grossman, Quincy; J. Arthur Baker, Pittsfield, and Winfield A. Schuster, Douglas.

For Goodwin were two Republicans, Edmund Cote, Fall River; Frank Brooks, Watertown, and the Democrats, Daniel H. Coakley, William G. Hennessey, James J. Brennan and Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley.

Goodwin was sworn into office by the governor in the presence of the council immediately after the meeting. Before leaving for the registry Goodwin said:

"I shall perform the duties of this office as I did before for eight years and as I served as chairman of the finance commission—no fix, no partiality, strict enforcement of the law."

Governor Curley said:

"I know that under your administration the public will be adequately safeguarded and the duties properly performed."

Ryan, whose baby is ill with pneumonia at his West Roxbury home, issued the following statement:

"I regret that it is impossible, due to conditions at home, to welcome my successor and personally to thank every employe at the registry for their loyalty.

"I was removed by law, as everyone knows, without the courtesy of a hearing. The reason, politics.

"However, I accept my removal in that light, knowing better than anyone else that not one of my official acts was colorable.

"I have tried to be just at all times, fair, and always to realize the great responsibilities of my oath of office.

"I despise fixers and resent any intimation that I abused my discretion at any time where the lives and safety of the public were involved.

"I will return to private practise of the law, with the kindest thoughts for the people of Massachusetts who have tried to help me in the conduct of my office."

JUDGES MOURN
At Officer's Bier

The funeral of Court Officer Timothy D. McInerney of the Roxbury court house was held this morning at the Mission Church, Roxbury.

The celebrant of the mass was the Rev. Thomas McPartland, Rev. James Bolger served as deacon and Rev. Vincent Watson, sub-deacon.

Among the mourners were four judges, Chief Justice Albert F. Hayden, Judge Timothy J. Ahern, Judge Frank [illegible] W. L. M[illegible] of the Roxbury district court and Judge Frank J. Burke of the Boston municipal court.

Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

O. O. McINTYRE
NEW YORK
Day By Day

New York, Feb. 6—Every public idol eventually has to hurdle a mighty barrier of frozen adulation. Americans can cheer just so long, and then they turn on a hiss. Kicking shins of clay has become a national pastime. Even Lindbergh was booed in a news reel a few weeks ago.

I've heard Dempsey razzed without a dissenting cheer. Today a cafe corporation pays him $52,000 a year and a percentage just to stand around the entrance.

O. O. McIntyre

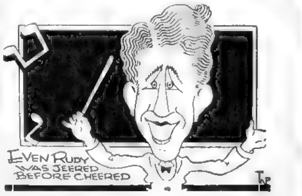
Tunney [illegible]

But [illegible] ford went beyond the dark cloud, to emerge triumphantly.

New York's best dressed man, according to an exclusive tailor, is not of the stage, screen or is it the social register, William Goadby Loew. The [illegible] is a bachelor of middle years. Outside seven modestly toned suits yearly, he buys only white shirts and sedate ties. Colors are reserved for pajamas and house robes. His hose are invariably of black silk and handkerchiefs solid white with inset monograms of white. His sartorial aplomb is bulwarked by meticulous care of his nails, coiffure, constantly fresh gloves and a supply of full bark malaccas.



EVEN RUDY WAS JEERED BEFORE CHEERED

David Warfield has abandoned his long favorite game of pinochle. And his devotions are now for rummy. Since his stage retirement he dropped in at the Lambs every mid-afternoon for his round of pinochle until recently. The veteran actor attends but one party a year and his host is always Maj. Bowes. He rarely goes to see a legitimate play, but now and then steps in a movie to see a combination stage show and feature picture. He often posts encouraging notes to newcomers.

It's good news Harry Leon Wilson has picked up his pen again and revived the Ma Pettingill series. Wilson's recent years have been spent in Carmel, Cal., where Lincoln Steffens and so many who have dazzled the literary world reside. In his earlier days Wilson, as his pugnacious jaw, only rivaled by his friend George Horace Lorimer's, indicates, was one of the most robust of literati. His boon companion in roister was Booth Tarkington, with whom he traveled extensively and collaborated in a number of plays. Several years ago he began a rigor of self-discipline which even included abandoning coffee.

Taxi Men Coffee Addicts

Outside of Damon Runyon, likely the hardiest coffee drinkers are night hawk taxi drivers. They profess their indulgence is largely to keep them alert at dawn, but there is also the lure of contact with their fellows. The astonishing growth of those fragrant [illegible] corner Coffee Pot places on well-traveled [illegible] is due to the taxi coffee [illegible]. A dozen cups [illegible] are a [illegible]. And almost [illegible] gulped without cream or sugar.

Shortening the Sentence

It was Burgess, by the way, who brought Will Rogers to his banquet feet one time [illegible] and gasping. Introducing the humorist, he said: "I [illegible] a certain entomologist [illegible] to test the laws of heredity and nutrition, cut off the wings of flies for 13,000 generations [illegible] whether or not he would [illegible] breed a race of w[illegible].

MANSFIELD JOBS
Bill Fought

On a bill to allow Mayor Mansfield to name division, as well as department heads, without regard to civil service, opposition was raised at the State House today before the legislative committee on civil service.

One speaker pointed out that many who have given years of their life to city service would be thrown out of work by such a measure. The committee took the move under advisement.

CITY SELLS BONDS
At Record Price

A short-term loan of $4,000,000 at interest of only 85 one-hundredths of one per cent a year established a new record for the city today.

It was awarded by Mayor Mansfield to a syndicate headed by the Chase National Bank of New York, one of 26 bidders.

Mayor Mansfield pointed out that a similar loan for $3,000,000 cost the city last year 2.60 per cent.

Mesh Stops Plunge

Wire meshing on a skylight saved Frank Bertino, 44, a Massachusetts painter, from falling into the kitchen of a house at [illegible] Glenwood street today after he had plunged 20 feet from the top of a ladder. He was cut and suffered possible internal injuries.

ETHEL In Pinochle TRIBUTE

'DELIGHTS' MISS BARRYMORE

It all came out with the recent announcement of the national pinochle championship tournament sponsored in this city by the Boston Evening American in association with P. Hal Sims, authority on contract bridge, pinochle and other card games and author of many books on bridge.

"Pinochle," said Miss Barrymore, "is a delightful game. I'm glad it is becoming popular."

And popular, Miss Barrymore, is the precise word for it if you consider the babble of conversation in offices, drawing rooms, "El" trains and on the street, and the flutter of entries into the Boston Evening American inspired by the magic of the pinochle tournament announcement.

Two-Handed Game

Hundreds of Bostonians, of both sexes and all varieties of skill, are preparing to pit their pinochle technique against all comers for the Greater Boston championship at the Hotel Bradford, beginning the week of February 18. The Boston champion will then play against representatives of 15 other cities at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, for the national championship during the week of March 11.

The winner of the Boston Evening American Pinochle Tournament will not only win $300 for the local crown but will vie for the grand prize of $1000 to be awarded to the national winner. Boston's representative will have all expenses paid to and from New York.

Mr. Sims has chosen two of New England's outstanding bridge players and tournament managers, to assist him in conducting the contest here.

The play will be individual, the game two-handed pinochle. Play will be for games, instead of points, 1000 points constituting a game. The forty-eight pinochle will be used.

There will be a nominal entry for the first day's play of 25 cents, the entire gate to go to the Emergency Campaign. The only requirement to enter the tournament is to sign the coupon appearing with this story and mail it to the Pinochle Tournament Editor, Boston Evening American.

DEWING TO HOLD

Brett Inquest

Attorney-General Paul A. Dever today announced that District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing would hold an inquest into the death of Donald Cutting Brett, wealthy Roxbury department store executive, who was found dead in his Brookline home almost two years ago.

The hearing will be in Brookline, he said, on a date to be announced by Dewing. Dever also announced that he would ask Mrs. [illegible] Dadmun Brett, the dead man's widow, for the names of those she wants called as witnesses.

Late Breakfast

Welcome After Escape

A three-alarm, $20,000 fire which destroyed their home at 31 Hansborough street, Dorchester, kept Mrs. Alda Blake, above, and her two-and-a-half-year-old daughter, Myrna, from breakfast until kind-hearted neighbors provided it. Now it is doubly welcome. Hot coffee for mother—and a regular grown-up coffee roll for baby Myrna, who's too busy to talk. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

CALLES GUARDED

Starts Home

Los Angeles, Feb. 6 (US)—Closely guarded because of rumors political foes might attempt to take his life, Plutarco Elias Calles, former president of Mexico and still a dominant figure in politics there, was escorted by 20 policemen from a hospital to the special train now carrying him to Mexico City.

TOWN VIEWS

First Motor Vehicle

[illegible], Ont., Feb. 6 (AP)—This tiny lumbering hamlet, 170 miles northwest of Sudbury, today boasted its first motor vehicle—in fact it was the first automobile many of its adult population had ever seen.

PANTS for Girls O.K.'ED

SKI DRESS UP TO STUDENTS

High school principals around Greater Boston have too many things to do besides going around banning ski pants for girl students.

That's what they said today—some of them, anyhow. Others were less definite in disagreeing with New Bedford high school's ban on what were politely termed "sport garments." But they disagreed, just the same.

Principal G. Walter Williams of New Bedford promulgated the edict against the ski pants. Not a principal in Boston, Quincy, Lynn, Malden, Medford, Melrose or Everett would join him.

Most of the principals seemed to think that if the girls insisted on wearing the heavy outdoor equipment in hot classrooms it was their own hard luck.

Said Patrick J. Campbell, superintendent of the Boston school system:

"There have been no restrictions made here, because we are leaving it up to the good sense of the girls and the masters themselves.

"It's easy to see that wearing heavy garments in class might be very uncomfortable, but we depend on the good taste of the girls."

Down in Lynn the high school girls agreed it was a case of just that. They wouldn't possibly think of wearing pants to class. One said:

"Why, there would be just as much sense to wearing a riding habit to school, boots and all! And besides, think of the trouble of stuffing skirts and dresses into the pants."

Principal Fred C. Mitchell of Lynn [illegible] said he [illegible] girls with the sport [illegible] on [illegible] the snow and cold weather. But [illegible] remarked:

"I haven't any objections, if the girls want to [illegible] them."

It was Headmaster Ernest L. Collins of Quincy, however, who summed up the [illegible] in a few words:

"They are the best in cold weather. They keep the girls much warmer than skirts. If the girls get too warm in classes, they can go out to a dressing room and slip on a skirt.

"I can't see that they cause any particular distraction in classes.

"Besides, we have too much to do about the school to be bothered with placing an edict on ski pants."

HARVARD GIVES

10 Scholarships

Scholarships for 10 New Englanders in the dental school and four in the law school were announced today by Harvard University.

Two Bostonians, George I. Donahue and Carl T. Leander, won dental school awards. Bertram H. Loewen[illegible] of Roxbury was the only Boston student on the law school list.

Other dental course winners included Daniel J. H[illegible], Jr., of Chelsea; Edward S. Harris, of Needham; J[illegible] Oskar, of Lawrence; Albert A. Leveto[illegible], of Springfield; Joseph M. Bak[illegible]r, of Brattleboro, Vt.; John A. Tarule and John L. Bishop, of Nashua, N. H., and Harold Rapoport, of Hartford, Ct.

Nestor S. F[illegible], of Somerville, Harry M. Plotk[illegible], of Ata[illegible] and George A. Teitz of Newport, R. I., were other law winners.

DOLAN to Face PROBE

FINANCE BOARD SETS DATE

Chairman E. Mark Sullivan of the Boston finance commission will ask his fellow members tomorrow to set a date for the examination of former City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan who has just returned from Florida.

"It is significant that his return was postponed until I was out of the way."

Glad to Appear

To which Attorney Thomas H. Mahoney, counsel for Dolan, replied:

"That statement is too absurd to warrant any detailed reply. It was stated from the beginning that when Mr. Dolan recovered from an illness he would return to Boston.

"He will be glad to appear before the finance commission and I have already notified Mr. Sullivan to that effect."

Chairman Sullivan, in making public that fact that he had been notified of Dolan's willingness and ability to appear before the commission, renewed hostilities with Farnum. He said:

"The commission has been handicapped by the removal of numerous papers connected with this investigation from the office of this commission to his own office by the special investigator.

Probe Goes On

"The so-called Dolan investigation has not been stopped one minute. The resignation of the special investigator with typical blowing of horns merely ended his particular service.

"This, in fairness to the other employes, I desire to state only amounted to a fraction of the work done in this matter."

The inquiry into Dolan's administration as city treasurer centers about purchases of bonds for the city and his connection, if any, with firms from which the city of Boston bought securities.

When Dolan was [illegible] before the commission it was announced he was recovering from a severe cold in Florida.

NO BAN

On 'Sailor Beware'

BUT IT'S OUT

City Censor Herbert L. McNary [illegible] officially 'banned' the play 'Sailor Beware,' he said today.

BUT—

'Sailor Beware' will not open in Boston as planned for a week from Monday.

Censor McNary admitted he went to the Wilbur Theater and told an employe that other Boston mayors had abandoned all idea of putting on the play because it [illegible] protest.

The theater management construed that as a "ban" and called off the booking plans.

Mayor Mansfield announced that no advance notice of a ban on any play will be announced in the future. He said:

"From now on all plays will be shown first. If it warrants censorship, it will be banned after the first presentation."

GIRGO

PLEA DENIED

In spite of his declared belief that they were indicted on "hearsay" evidence, Judge Nelson P. Brown refused in Middlesex court today to direct verdict of not guilty for four youths on trial in the Wilmington "spot" murder of Luigi Girgo, North End baker.

He also denied motions for a mistrial and to quash the indictments and ordered that the case be given the jury.

The four accused, Angelo DeVito, 20; James Penta, 34; Aniello Orlando, 44, all of the North End, and Julio Ventura, 27, of East Boston, may know their fate late tonight or tomorrow.

$25 For Wreck TIP

WOMAN WINS FIRST PRIZE

By THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

In the excitement of a Framingham train wreck last week, a Marlboro reader of the Boston Evening American exhibited rare presence of mind.

Second prize of $10 in the weekly awards that total $50 goes to another woman, a resident of Boston, who realized that a spectacular fire in the home of Internal Revenue Collector Carney was big news.

Third prize of $5 went this week to H. R. McCormack of 41 Prospect st., Georgetown, who reported a fire that destroyed Georgetown High School. For stories of lesser importance, 10 awards of $1 each were given the following:

You are into a brand new week. News is around somewhere. If you see it, share in the cash awards by calling the News Tip Editor at Liberty 4000.

2. Drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

3. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets in a third of a glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat soreness almost instantly.

You can relieve nearly any cold you get by taking BAYLR Aspirin, drinking plenty of water; and, if throat is sore, gargling with BAYER Aspirin Tablets stirred in water.

This is recognized as a remarkably safe, sure, QUICK way. For it will relieve an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, be sure that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve or disintegrate almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And in a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets disintegrate with speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness.

TERMS BOUTS 'DISGRACE'

LET HIM JOIN CIRCUS, HE SAYS

By Jack Conway

Providence, Feb. 6 — Max Baer is wrecking the boxing game by his clowing and vaudeville antics during exhibition contests, according to Edward C. Foster, president of the National Boxing Association, which controls the destinies of the ring game in 36 states.

"Baer has made a burlesque show out of the boxing game," said Foster in a fiery interview with this writer here today. "He is touring the country giving the public laughs at the expense of boxing.

"The sport is almost dead, and Baer is helping to bury it. His recent exhibitions have been disgraceful. He lifts his opponents from the floor and carries them around the ring while he whistles a waltz.

"I don't think the public wants to see the champion knock out boxers like Jim Maloney and Dick Madden. I think, however, Max should box them and not put on a clown's act.

"If Baer must be a clown, let him join a circus or get a job on the burlesque stage.

"Fight fans have become disgusted with his antics, and this explains why his recent exhibitions have been financial flops.

"The public expects boxing from the king of heavyweights and will not patronize a side show. I believe boxing commissions should take action to stop these farces.

"If you want to find out what is the matter with the boxing game you only have to attend one of these Baer comedies."

Max Baer

"Barney Ross defended the so-called welterweight championship against Frankie Klick at Miami," said Foster. "These junior titles are a joke, and are not taken seriously by anybody but the owners.

"A junior bantamweight champion is now on the way to America from Europe. He will insist that his opponents make 115 pounds. I am for giving him a ticket back to Europe."

The boss of the National Boxing Association revealed that Jimmy McLarnin and Barney Ross have come to terms for a world welterweight championship bout in June

TITLE TILTERS TEETER TOTTER

DICK KUNAN LEO VOLK

A tipsy sport is canoe tilting. It's easy, say these two, National tilting champions, who compete in the Sportsmen's Show at Mechanics Building tonight. Kunan and Volk represent the Samoset Canoe Club of Roxbury.

Volk, Kunan Should Gain Canoe Final

Finalists in the New England indoor championship canoe tilting contest at Mechanics Building are expected to be Dick Kunan and Leo Volk, Francis Bingham and Henry Bingham.

Kunan and Volk of Samoset Canoe Club West Roxbury, national champions, compete in the preliminaries at Mechanics Building tonight

The Bingham Brothers, New England champions, compete tomorrow. Semifinals will be held Friday, finals on Saturday.

LADITZI ON SPOT TONIGHT

How much longer Rowdy Rudy Laditzi will get away with his outrages will be definitely learned tonight when the new bad man of the mat tangles with handsome Leo Numa in the feature of Alex MacLean's wrestling show at the Boston Arena.

Numa will step through the ropes a 10-9 favorite.

Bob Russell

The Clark Gable of the grapplers, will depend on his torturous "go-behind" toe hold to crush Laditzi, while the Rowdy is likely to use nothing more than his usual variety of kicks, gouges, bites, strangles and punches.

American Association rules will govern but they probably won't govern much, for Laditzi has little regard for rules. It looks like a stormy session for Al Morelli, slated to referee.

The former Red Demon, Wallace Moskovitch, will face Gene Ledoux in the semifinal. Special bouts will be Jean Dubue vs. Rebel Bob Russell and Farmer George McLeod vs. Harry Lewis.

N. L. MAGNATES LEND HELPING HAND

By Max Kase

New York, Feb. 6—The troublesome Braves problem has been stamped 'finished business' on the National League docket, and today officials of the club bravely began preparations for the 1935 season.

An active session of the National League magnates, which lasted more than three hours, straightened out the curlicues and the snarls in the affairs of the Boston club.

Most important matters decided on were:

Judge Emil Fuchs will remain as president of the Braves.

The lease on Braves Field, held by the National League, has been made over to the Tribe.

The club has been found financially solvent to carry on for the 1935 season.

Bill McKechnie will continue as manager.

All of the club owners of the league were present or represented when Judge Fuchs made his most impassioned appeal and fight which saw him triumph to remain as head of the club.

Charles Adams, principal stockholder of the club, as well as L. F. Tulman, a vice-president of the First National Bank of Boston, were also present.

LEAGUE HELPS

The bank holds several hundred thousand dollars in notes which are past due. They all appeared satisfied at the turn of events.

"Judge Fuchs has made such progress in the past thirty days," President Frick stated after the meeting, "the National League and Adams thought it for the best interests of the league that he continue as head of the Braves.

"We believe the Judge is solving his problem."

It is believed that the league after Fuchs had shown his ability to take care of the pressing debts of the club, amounting to $50,000, and also his ability to finance the spring training part of the team has guaranteed the Gaffney Estate, the First National Bank and Adams the amounts due them from the Braves.

"The National League has subleased Braves Field to the Boston Club at a substantial saving in rental, through the courtesy of the Gaffney interests," President Frick said.

He stated that in effect the league was guaranteeing the Gaffneys the rent of the field for the [illegible] of the lease which [illegible] to 1946.

CRESCENTS TO PLAY HERE

By Bill Grimes

For two periods at the Boston Garden, where Bruins hung a 4—2 defeat on Detroit Red Wings, the fans, numbering approximately 11,000, were treated to the brand of hockey that made the game famous and the promoters millionaires

Tiny Thompson

During those hectic 40 minutes both clubs shot their bolts, so the final chapter was a very drab affair . . . There was more action in the first and second chukkers than usually crops up in a couple of full games.

Jerry Goodman—and from our vantage point he ruled correctly—put the fans in a frame of mind whereby they'd think nothing of slugging their wife, by allowing the first Detroit goal . . . Failure on the part of Goodman to rule without any hesitancy was responsible for the wild protests by the Bruins, whose cause was taken up by the fans.

Curley Pulls In His Sports Latchstring

Austen Lake

NOW THAT JAMES M. CURLEY has broken in his new governorship so that the corns and bunions of his statecraft no longer pinch, I hear he has yanked in the latchstring that formerly was out to whiskery moochers and sports simpletons on the muncipal stoop when he was mayor of Boston.

It was no trick for a publicity manager to tow a wrestler or glove fighter past the outer grill and into the throne room when Curley was mayor

James M. would cast a quick hen's eye over his horn rims, while a flannel footed flunkey shushed the wrestler's party into straight - back chairs along the walls, saying that the mayor was hearing a very important matter about building another handball court at the L-street baths

And finally Curley would peel off his headlights and say in a richly mellow voice that this was a worthy work, deserving the hearty support of right-minded people, and please table it for the present.

* * *

THEN CURLEY, BEING FAMILIAR with the routine of posing with the sports simpletons, would rise, strike statesman pose No. 5, and screw up his sport page smile

And sometimes to add the human touch, he would snatch up some office gadget like a desk clock or silver salvar and pretend to present it to the athlete, afterwards grabbing it back again.

I never could see what the mayor got out of all this except a dab, or lick of goodwill from people whose good will did not amount to much anyway.

It has been a long time since any of these handshake pictures sneaked by the sports desk, which is always presided over by a gimlet-eyed argus with stomach ulcers, an ingrown grouch and a fondness for photos of girlish leg meat and petticoat flounces.

Maybe in yanking in his latchstring to the sports simpletons and publicity moochers now, the governor realizes that the common-people are not so gullible as they once were and that it must be something pretty bad to interest them, so that a waffle-eared wrestler, a champion pie-eater, or a boy marble wizard standing next to a statesman is no treat at all to folk who buy their daily literature for two cents a copy.

Or it may be that, being on the people's time, Curley realizes that gubernatorial moments are more golden, as they tick into eternity, than mayoral minutes were when they dripped into nowhere.

LIKE THE GRACE-NOTES OF an orchestral overture, there are undertones in the sports pages that lead to another Baer-Carnera silly symphony next summer.

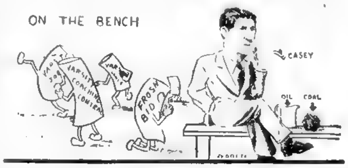
Referee Art Donovan, who, in the ring resembles a male Zasu Pitts, is giving off piccolo chirps of how, if he had lived to the strict letter of boxing law, Primo would still be champ—a curious admission. And Baer, on the Pacific coast, is stretching his rubber face into monkey puckers.



Here is a contest that should stir up the wildest disinterest, as a revival of the mid summer night's lunacy when, last June, Carnera went sleep walking into the arms of the referee, mistaking him for a gentleman usher, and asking to be shown to a comfortable chair.

It was an evening of fun, as comical as a hired man's attempt to harness an ox.

Yet by summer the affair will be warmed over and dished up as an appetizing trifle at $22.50 the plate.

AS EDDIE CASEY PLODS his route, wooing furnace coal and oil orders, he must feel a philosophical twinge as he reads about the dinners, ruffles and flourishes being accorded by Harvard men to Dick Harlow

Four years ago Eddie was munching Harvard suppers as the honored guest, listening to elder alumni make speeches in the he-man howdy vein.

He had risen to respond with a pert up-and-at-'em speech, salted with witty turns and the hope, within a few years, the glory of the Crimson would wave triumphant over the collegiate round tower

Now, being a quiet type, given to silent, hideaway suffering, he has evaporated from the football scene to hustle fuel orders.

It is reported that he can have the Harvard freshman job, paying $3000; that he is waiting on the off-chance that a varsity place in some other institution will turn up

There is precedent for his drop from varsity to class team coaching. Dr. Marvin Stevens did it at Yale three seasons ago, Reggie Root did it there last year.

TOP SALARY TO BE PAID a major league pitcher in the history of baseball is the $25,000 which Lefty Grove received from Tom Yawkey's Red Sox last year. Previously he had drawn $24,000 from Connie Mack.

Now Dizzy Dean has fastened a $25,000 price tag to himself, although apparently he had agreed to accept a lower figure during his December conversation with Cardinal owner Sam Breadon

This may be an attempt to steal some of Babe Ruth's old thunder and keep himself fresh as sport page matter over the dull interval. In the end, when the warm spring winds blow, Dizzy, like Babe, will compromise at a lower figure

In the history of baseball, only two men have stayed holdouts and retired for the sake of a principle

One was Charley "Butch" Schmidt, the old 1914 Braves first baseman, who was getting $3500 and wanted $500 more

The other was Ed Roush, the Giant outfielder, who asked $18,000 and went back to hoe potatoes on his Indiana farm when he was offered a mere $15,000.

He is still hoeing.

He took over the toughest job ever handed any man in the [illegible] tory of sports, with one [illegible] exception.

He was told to go [illegible] the New York Giants [illegible] when even the greatest [illegible] manager of 'em all, John McGraw —had despaired of the [illegible]. They said he could [illegible] did.

JIMMY JOHNSTON

The best available information is that Madison Square Garden [illegible] to be leased for boxing to an [illegible] side promoter. Jimmy [illegible] is one of the bidders but [illegible] likely to be the lucky one [illegible] one.

That will mean that [illegible] man in the derby will be [illegible] at the Garden.

I should like, therefore, to [illegible] the prediction that he will [illegible] gentlemen who own the Garden more trouble when be[illegible] side looking in than [illegible] given them wh[illegible] looking out.

$171,054,506 WAGERED LAST YEAR

GANSETT THIRD IN RANKING

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6—The rapid spread of legalized wagering on horse racing has produced substantial public revenue, based on a compilation of 1934 figures, and it is likely to show a marked increase this year.

Figures for last year show the income for 13 states from license fees or a percentage of the handle by the pari-mutuel machines aggregated $5,800,139.22.

W[ith] New York and Rhode Island [illegible] 1934 [illegible] per cent in [illegible] revenue over 1933 [illegible] comparison is [illegible] of the absence of [illegible] official reports.

A total of $171,054,506 was wa[gered] [illegible] with figures from New York [illegible] State in which handbooks [illegible] and [illegible] unavail[able].

I[llinois] [illegible] led in total wagers with $27,[illegible] but ranked no better [than] seventh in amount paid to the state with $1[illegible].

Ranking second to Illinois [illegible] amount wagered with $25,307,[illegible] Maryland topped the [illegible] to the state with a total of $863,269.

Doubts Hornbostel Will Break His Record

REV. CUTBILL Reviews 2:12 BUFFALO RACE

By
Riley

While the experts are predicting a new 1000-yard record for Charlie "Chuck" Hornbostel of Indiana when he runs here in the B. A. A. games at Boston Garden next Saturday night, the man with the most to lose by such a performance is perhaps the least fearful of the Hoosier's success.

It was back in Ma[rch] of 1[922] that [illegible] C. Cutbill, running for [illegible] B. A. A. team, ran [illegible] special 1000-yard race on the eight lap Buffalo track.

His time was 2 minutes 12 seconds, breaking Joe Ray's previous mark of 2 minutes 13 2-5 seconds.

"Since then," stated the Rev. Cutbill, pastor of the Third Religious Society of Dorchester, "I have seen many fine middle distance runners come along who had it within them to lower my indoor time.

"There were Ray Conger, Lloyd Hahn and Dr. Paul Martin of Switzerland, just to mention a few. Yet every one of them failed, Martin coming the nearest when he turned in a 2:12 1-5 performance in New York.

"And I don't think that Hornbostel, fine runner and capable as he is, will meet with any better success. Especially here in Boston where the track is much slower."

LAUDS RYDER

"The Flying Parson," a term which sticks to the former [illegible] wearer, gives Jack Ryder, [illegible] College and B. A. A. [illegible] for being the greatest middle distance coach in the world.

"Jack was entirely responsible for my success," adds the Dorchester pastor.

"I had tied Joie Ray's world record of 2:13 2-5 in the National A. A. U. championships at Buffalo in 1922. As a reward for equaling Ray's mark, a special race was arranged that I might get a chance to break it.

"Jack Ryder mapped out my program and counseled me. In the race were Chris O'Leary, of New Hampshire University, who was given 25 yards handicap; and a Buffalo runner whose name I don't recall now, who had 30 yards.

"There were five and one half laps to the 1000 yard run. I caught the front man within a lap and a half, which meant I had to run the last four laps without competition.

"Ryder insists, and I am inclined to agree with him, realizing how full of running I was, that if I had met stiff competition, I would have been able to turn in a 2:10 as easy as falling off a log.

"If I was to bet on Saturday's race, I would bet against Hornbostel breaking my record. In fact I am so sure of it that to me it wouldn't be a bet but evidence of good judgment and a sound financial proposition . . . for me.

"In any event I will be on hand for the race and if Hornbostel lowers 2:12 which has stood for 13 years, I will be the first to congratulate him."

Help Boys Is Lake's Plea

Sports Columnist Urges Secretary of Boyhood in U. S. Cabinet

"A Secretary of Boyhood in the United States cabinet" was the suggestion offered by Austen Lake, Boston Evening American sports columnist, feature speaker of the fifth monthly smoker of the Salem Chamber of Commerce at Hotel Hawthorne.

"After we are gone the people who will carry on are the boys," Lake said in amplifying his remarks. "And if they are not of the right calibre the structure of the state will fail."

"All men should learn the elements of sportsmanship," the American's brilliant feature writer continued. "The lessons learned on the field of athletic endeavor stand the boy in good stead in the later stormy periods of life. They teach him how to survive the hardships of business.

"Youth needs an outlet. He gets it in sports. I believe that young men and boys are community problems. Therefore the community should give them an opportunity to satisfy their play instincts.

"If the community fails, youth will get its pleasure where it can. They start by stealing milk and tying cans to the tails of cats and dogs. Then they branch out into holdups, not so much for money as for the adventure which they all crave."

Lake, one of Lafayette's gridiron immortals who later saw service during the World War and in the French ambulance corps and the United States tank service, told about his visits and talks with youngsters in reformatories.

"Those boys were largely victims of bad starts. If they had been given a chance to develop a hobby, and sports with most boys is one of the most popular of hobbies, then both their parents, themselves and the community and state would have been spared disastrous consequences."

HORSE Dinner at STATLER

MORE THAN 500 TO ATTEND

By Ed Cogswell

"Away to a good start," is the word from Hotel Statler where is assembled the devotees of the horse in celebrating the 22d annual New England Horsemen's Day.

Noticed among the large gathering is followers of the running horse, the trotter and pacer, the horse show and admirers of all equines, no matter what their specialty in harness or saddle.

All differences in opinion is forgotten, however, as the horsey crowd rub shoulders and meet each other in friendly greetings. Each are present for one distinctive purpose: To feast and toast The HORSE.

Not only all parts of New England are represented, but familiar faces are seen from New York and other states. The popularity of Horsemen's Day is shown by reservations having been made to seat more than 500 at the banquet tonight.

It marks, too, the first time in the career of the annual event that women have been invited to take part. Up to now it has been a strictly gander party, but in recent years the gentle sex have become much identified with horses as owners on the race track and the horse shows.

With this fact in mind the banquet committee concluded it was time that women's sphere in the horse world be fully established and maintained by sharing in the annual festivity.

Cornell Sends Fleet Relay

—By Jack Conway—

SPEAKING of news: Cornell will send a crack relay team to the B. A. A. games at the Garden on Saturday night. It will compete against Princeton and Tech.

* * *

Bob Linders, star sprinter, will also be brought to Boston by Jack Moakley, one of the most able track coaches in the country. Linders will compete in the dash and will also run on the Cornell relay team.

Mr. Boston

* * *

It is more than a decade since Cornell has sent members of its track team to a B. A. A. meet. I saw the great John Paul Jones win the mile run at a B. A. A. meet at Mechanics Building.

I am glad Tom Kanaly has selected Mike Devanney to fire the starter's gun in the Hunter Mile. Mike won the Hunter Mile in 1915 and in 1917. He was one of the best milers of his period.

WARRENTON

TERRY Warrenton of Nova Scotia, who tosses a mean right duke, returns to the local boxing wars when he collides with Abe Feldman in a 10-round bout at the Arena on next Monday night.

* * *

Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, will step into Rochester, N. Y., tonight, where he will have Billy Bartush as an opponent. He expects to knock Bartush off with his "Irish whip."

ENGLISH HEAVIES

PETE REILLY, now in England with Freddy Miller, had the right dope on Jack Peterson when he said he was only an ordinary heavyweight, and that a first class boxer like Jack Sharkey could knock him out easily.

Walter Neusel, German heavyweight, put Peterson out of the running for a title bout with Max Baer when he stopped him in a bout in London.

* * *

Jack Dempsey had planned to bring Peterson to this country. He felt that a tussle between the English champion and Baer would have drawn a big gate.

* * *

There was also talk of Baer first meeting Peterson in a no-decision bout in Europe as part of the build-up for the American title defense match.

* * *

Peterson, Scott, Beckett, Wells! The British heavyweight champions of recent years have certainly been a sorry lot.

* * *

* * *

SOX PITCHERS

THE future hopes of the Red Sox are in their pitchers, according to Eddie Collins and Joe Cronin.

Wes Ferrell, Ostermuller and Welch did the best work last season. They will be back this year, and will be supported by Grove, Rhodes, Johnson, Pipgras, Mulligan, Walberg and Jack Wilson, the latter acquired in the deal that sent Bill Cissell to Portland, Oregon.

* * *

"Anything we can salvage out of Grove and Pipgras will be so much of a gain," said Collins. "I still think Grove will come through for us. Pipgras was of no value last season, but says his arm is all right now. If he can win a few ball games, he will be worth his salary."

* * *

* * *

I have been greatly impressed by the pitching of the youthful Ostermuller. He looks like one of the great southpaws of baseball and is set to shoot to the top.

* * *

RANDOM SHOTS

BRAVES GET BREAKS

Open April 16

WITH MAGNETIC GIANTS DOING CATCHING

By Joe Cashman

Just before tossing Judge Fuchs a life-preserver, the National League ratified a schedule which gives the Braves "prexy" every opportunity to keep his head above water after the race starts.

The only horse racing in Massachusetts during the baseball campaign will be from July 3 to August 10. During that period the Tribe has only seven games listed at home.

His harassed Warriors are given the honor of opening the local season on April 16 and the New York [illegible] opposition.

The Terrymen also will fill the foe role at the Wigwam on July 4 and two Sundays, including September 29, the last day of the race.

HOLIDAYS

[illegible]

The world champion Cardinals, Pirates, Dodgers and Phillies, as well as the Giants, make two Sabbath appearances here, with the Cubs and Reds each coming once.

They're booked in Philadelphia on May 30 and in Brooklyn on Labor Day.

EAST BOSTON BOY SCORES BIG HIT IN MOVIES

Indrisano Crashes Hollywood

The above photo proves that Johnny has gone "movie." If further proof is needed, a visit to Loew's Orpheum Theater, beginning Friday, to see "The Winning Ticket," will convince you.

Then he was given a part in "Student Tour," and now he becomes a full fledged performer in "The Winning Ticket," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest release which features Leo Carrillo, Ted Healy, Louise Fazenda and a host of other comedians.

HORNBOSTEL

New York, Feb. 6—Charles Hornbostel, of Evansville, Ind., former co-captain of the Indiana university track team, was selected by a jury of sportswriters as the outstanding athlete of the Millrose track and field games in Madison Square Garden Saturday night. He won the same award last year.

DANNO CONQUERS REBEL RUSSELL

By Jack Conway

Danno gained the first fall in 14m 35s. when he came out of a bridge to pin Russell with a body roll. He won the second fall in [illegible] 46s. with his famous 'Irish Whip.'

Mayor James Dunne of Providence and Judge Jeremiah E. O'Connell, presiding justice of the Rhode Island Superior Court, were at the ringside, and visited O'Mahoney in his dressing room following the match.

O'Mahoney displayed more speed than he has in any of his Boston bouts. He set a terrific pace from the start, and completely overwhelmed the rugged Rebel.

When Russell took a punch at Danno after the bout, the Irish champion cut loose with a two-handed attack that sent 'Rebel' Bob to the canvas.

Russell resorted to rough [illegible] early in the contest. O'Mahoney kept crowding him and scored with arm and body holds.

O'Mahoney came out of a bridge to score with a body roll which gave him the first fall in 14m 35s.

O'Mahoney swarmed all over Russell when wrestling was resumed. He beat Bob back under a two fisted attack.

A police escort [illegible]

"I would like to stage a bout between O'Mahoney and Sonnenberg in Providence," said Mitchell. "It would sell out the Auditorium."

FINE tobacco is a weakness of mine. And often I'm tempted to try the most expensive kinds. But fine tobacco, I've discovered, isn't necessarily high priced.

For steady smoking, I like Union Leader. Its smooth, well-matured Kentucky Burley never tires my taste; it's so fragrant and biteless.

Don't let that 10¢ price mislead you! It's hard to beat the satisfying qualities of Union Leader, at any price. (Great for cigarettes, too.)

Bob Ready of Boston Saves a Life and Nearly Loses His Own

By Floyd Gibbons

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, I've got a letter here today from Robert J. Ready, of 106 Tremont street, Brighton. Bob starts that letter by saying:

"If this yarn is not accepted, I will know that, as far as story telling is concerned, I am full of those French body pets so well known in the trenches."

FLOYD GIBBONS

Now I am not sure I know what Bob means by "French body pets."

I suspect he is talking about cooties. But during the war, all the cooties in France were on me, so I don't see how he could know anything about them.

And furthermore, I have gone through Bob's story-telling ability with a fine-tooth comb, and can't find a cootie on it anywhere. So here goes a check for 10 simoleons to Bob, and here comes Bob's yarn to you.

Bob Ready was in the navy when Old Lady Adventure stepped in and crowned him. In the fall of 1922 he was in Manila Bay—coxswain of the 40-foot motor cutter of the old U. S. S. Huron.

He was taking a liberty party back to the Huron, the night his big thrill came to him. And while taxi-ing a liberty party across the harbor sounds simple enough, it can be doggone dangerous business—as Bob's yarn will soon demonstrate.

There was one bird in that boat who didn't belong on the Huron. He was a big sailor, quite a bit under the weather, and he wanted to know if Bob's boat went to the General Alava, the admiral's yacht

"No," Bob told him. "But as long as you are here, I'll take you over there."

But if Bob had known what a mess that big stiff was going to get him into, he'd have doggone well let him swim to the General Alava

Bob swung his tiller over, pulled up alongside of the admiral's yacht, and unloaded that inebriated sailor. Then he told his stern man, Nerge Bledsoe, to shove off, and at the same time he gave the engineer the bell to go ahead.

Bledsoe gave a push with the boat hook, but instead of using the wooden handle, he shoved with the metal end of the hook. The metal end slipped along the smooth side of the yacht, and Bledsoe tumbled over into the water.

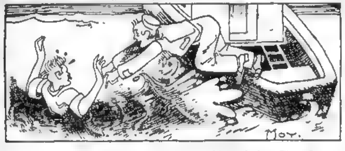
"I always thought Bledsoe could swim," says Bob, "but he came up floundering and making a terrible, gurgling sound, as if he were trying to cry for help, but couldn't.

"I gave the engineer two bells to stop, yelled to a lieutenant, who was standing in the stern sheets, to take the tiller, and jumped over the side of the boat."

By the time Bob got into the water, Bledsoe had gone down again but Bob began swimming toward the spot where he had seen him last

It was a good hunch, for no sooner had he reached the spot than Bledesoe popped up right beside him. Bob grabbed him and Bledsoe grabbed, too. In his panic, he grabbed Bob by the throat and began choking him to death

"What a grip that bird had!" says Bob. "I thought my chest was going to burst. We went under water—came up again—with Bledsoe still choking me. I'd heard of people in such a spot who got out of it by knocking the other guy cold.



"I swung on Bledsoe, and he went out like a light. Then I towed him over to the gangway of the yacht, and a couple of sailors who were standing by, hauled Bledsoe out of the water."

And that, boys and girls, was swell for Bledsoe. But Bob Ready's troubles hadn't even started yet. By the time Bob reached the gangplank he was pretty well all in

He tried to drag himself up out of the water, but couldn't make it The other two sailors were gone, carrying Bledsoe up on deck, so Bob just hung on, trying to get back his breath, and waiting for someone to come back and give him a hand

But nobody came back to give him a hand, and in the meantime Bob thought of something that just about scared the shirt off of him

For the first time in that hectic 10 minutes he remembered that sharks were plentiful in the waters around Manila, and he began kicking and splashing with his feet and hands, trying to frighten them away.

And then, as if sharks and exhaustion weren't enough trouble, he looked up at the sound of voices and saw his cutter pulling in toward the gangway, threatening to crush him between its side and the side of the General Alava

Bob gave a [illegible] and tried [illegible] to lift himself up on the gangway. By the light of the [illegible] head he could see something that looked like a rope [illegible] the [illegible]

He grabbed for it [illegible] might help him in his scramble to get out of the way, but that rope was just the last straw in Bob's [illegible] rotten breaks.

The doggone thing wasn't a rope at all, but the wire that fed the juice to the floodlights. It came out of the deck socket when Bob grabbed it—threw [illegible] away in black inky darkness

Bob went down again, and this time he thought for sure he was a gone chicken, for the wire came down on top of him—tangled in his arms and legs so that he could hardly move.

The cutter sheered off when the lights went out. That probably saved Bob from serious injury. But he had one heck of a time with that wire.

He couldn't swim, but he did manage to float, and when he hollered to the cutter, they came over and got him aboard

Well, sir, you'd think Bob's troubles would be over when he got back on that cutter, but Lady Luck still had one more sour apple in the bag for him

That lieutenant who had taken the tiller when Bob went overboard came to him and said "I'm going to report this to the captain."

And was he going to report Bob for his heroism—for risking his life to save a comrade? Not on your binnacle, he wasn't. That seagoing shavetail was going to report Bob for deserting his boat while it was under power.

SPRAGUE Talks ON GOLD Verdict

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Professor O. M. W. Sprague reiterates his belief the Supreme Court will uphold the government. But his address before the Financial Advertisers Association was also notable for his comments on industry, in our opinion.

Prefacing his remarks with a broad indictment of producing groups for holding to profit margins of the past decade, Professor Sprague went on to say that every industry needs a Ford. He pictures the lack of a competitive urge and sees it satisfied by a broad move toward lower price levels. That is the only way the Harvard economist sees to increase the relative demand for anything.

* * *

More and more often in the past week or two we have been told business is again drifting away from the administration. No open breach exists as yet but the danger is real. Such a happening can only retard the growth of confidence which has been so carefully nursed along since last fall. To our mind the situation will not be cured until Washington datelines fade out of business and financial newspages. Industry and finance may still have a lot to accomplish but they can hardly make much headway if one eye must be constantly glued on the Capitol.

* * *

Notebook: The bond market particularly reflects the rise of uncertainty . . . The Associated Press rail bond average has been in a steady downtrend since January 8 . . . And since the middle of last month the rate of decline has increased, while even minor rallies have been absent . . . The groundwork for a technical rally in rail liens seems to have been laid . . . But at this stage something more substantial is needed as a tonic for general markets and confidence.

* * *

Militant Senator Carter Glass thinks he has been given the runaround on the proposed Federal Reserve legislation. Indeed it appears he has. A promise of a consultation before presentation of the new bill was deftly circumvented. Now come stories the peppery Virginian will be denied the privilege of examining the measure proposed. His Senate sub-banking committee would ordinarily consider it. After repeated assurances a central bank scheme was "out," the financial district is worried it is "in" with benefit of disguise.

* * *

Shorts: The rails are hovering close to the critical 32 mark . . . It is to be understood that this does not refer to a daily low . . . But to either an hourly or final price on the Dow-Jones average . . . Union Pacific at 97 this morning looked bad . . . Some carrier shares only look fit for technical bulges . . . It is the industrial section that holds the most promise . . . But even a market divided against itself must fall . . . That is why it is hard to become over-enthusiastic.

* * *

While the gold clause decision in itself has been thoroughly discounted other and later developments have not been. The proposed Federal Reserve legislation is a case in point. Such things keep ideas on the market in a constant state of flux and one can well imagine what it does to the average business office. A bull plan such as we outlined yesterday seems to be the final recourse of the optimist. If it fails not much hope of a sound upmove remains.

California crude oil output for the week ended Feb. 2 averaged 476,000 barrels daily against 509,200 in the previous week.

STOCKS DRIFT Lower In Extreme Dullness

New York, Feb. 6—Renewed rails and utilities weakness sent the stock market lower again today. Union Pacific dropped more than 2 points, inducing further liquidation in Atchison, New York Central, Lackawanna, Southern Pacific and other pivotal rail issues.

In the utilities, American Water Works dropped about a point and other power and light shares were weak. American Telephone dropped more than a point.

Motors gave ground fractionally as General Motors and Chrysler met with offerings. Motor equipments also were soft reflecting labor troubles.

Rail Earnings

American Telephone turned heavy following overnight news of approval by the Senate Interstate Commerce committee of an appropriation of $750,000 for further investigation. Some time ago, however, American Telephone officials said the company had nothing to conceal and welcomed the investigation.

Rails, both bonds and stocks, seemed somewhat upset by recent earnings statements, and belief in some quarters that the administration's transportation program is being developed so as to facilitate reorganization and scaling down of debt of weaker roads. President Roosevelt said at his press conference today, nevertheless, the administration had not changed its program of making loans to weak roads.

It was noted also in financial quarters that the President discouraged some of the more inflationary interpretations placed upon the proposed banking legislation, calling the story that the legislation indicated an intention to abandon 40 per cent gold backing for notes fantastic.

Boston Market

STOCKS LOWER IN DULLNESS

Boston & Providence was down about 3, while Boston & Maine C stamped and Pacific Mills registered losses of 2 or more points.

New England Telephone was fractionally lower.

GRAINS

Chicago, Feb. 6 (AP)—Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅝ lower, May 94⅜-½, corn ⅛ off to ¼ up, May 82¾-½, oats unchanged to ⅛ down and provisions at 2 cents to 7 cents advance.

Governments

Change IN BUSINESS Status

By B. C. FORBES

Bigness in business doesn't necessarily mean big profits. Bigness doesn't necessarily mean efficiency, we are now learning.

Judge Gary used to rule the steel world with a rod of iron because he was regarded as possessing power to crush any offending competitor. The Steel Trust for many years was—or, at least, supposedly was—beyond competition, able to undersell all rivals, strong enough to ruin any manufacturer who dared cross it.

B. C. Forbes

Times and conditions have changed. The U. S. Steel Corporation no longer reigns autocratically supreme. No longer does it hold in its hand the issues of life or death for other steel companies.

Official figures reveal that the Morgan-organized billion-dollar steel giant's unquestioned dominance has been slipping. Competitors are booking an increasing share of the total business.

• • •

Not only so, but the Goliath can no longer produce steel cheaper than everybody else. No longer can it show a profit against losses by others. Its latest statistics disclose that it is doing poorer than various other steel manufacturers.

What's the explanation?

For one thing, specialized steels, steel alloys and the like have been developed energetically by smaller concerns. These modern products have been merchandised with greater aggressiveness than the Steel Corporation has exhibited.

Advertising, for example, has and is being utilized much more effectively by several other companies than by the Steel Corporation. In the advertising race, the Steel Corporation has made a poor showing, whereas several other steel companies have taken advertising seriously, engaged capable brains to handle it and have achieved notable results.

• • •

During modern times various products have been developed as competitors of steel. The originators of these products have taken advantage of the relative lethargy of the principal steel companies and have captured both the imagination of the people and orders from consumers.

Steel executives traditionally are production-minded—Charles M. Schwab was the conspicuous exception; he earned the title, "America's greatest salesman," and it was largely because of this quality that he proved able to develop a puny, down-at-the-heels, impecunious plant (Bethlehem) into an enterprise much larger than was the U. S. Steel Corporation when he was its first president.

In all this there is inspiration for the small business man of America. He need not meekly surrender to competition by giants. In other lines besides steel it has been proved that the best profit percentages have been earned, not by the biggest company, but by the wide-awake, alert, sales-minded concerns of lesser magnitude.

Reliance

Reliance Manufacturing Co., of Illinois (clothing manufacturers), reports for year ended Dec. 31, 1934, certified by independent auditors, net of $194,229 after taxes, interest and depreciation equivalent, after 7 per cent preferred dividends, to 38 cents a share on 215,905 shares of common. This compares with $789,155, or $3.05 a share on 220,330 common shares in 1933.

POWER

New York, Feb. 6 (AP)—Electric power output for last week was 1,762,671,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,781,666,000 the previous week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The increase over a year ago was 7.7 per cent, against an increase of 10.6 per cent the previous week.

Foreign Marts

London, Feb. 6 (AP)—Business was quiet on the Stock Exchange today, anxiety still existing regarding the commodity market situation. Profit taking caused recent favorites, including giltedged securities and television issues, and some industrials hardened in the afternoon. The market closed dull.

Paris—Trading was inactive in a hesitant session on the Bourse today due to political uncertainty. International issues were firm with the exception of Rio Tintos which dropped several points. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Quietness prevailed on the Boerse today owing to the absence of buyers which caused hesitancy. Quotations closed lower.

NEW ENGLAND

Tax Contributions Jump

Washington, Feb. 6 (AP)—New England's tax contribution to the federal income tax revenue jumped from $115,819,949 in 1933 to $168,402,246 in 1934, according to the annual report of the Internal Revenue Bureau, made public today.

| | 1933 | 1934 |
|---|---|---|
| Connecticut | $24,196,726 | $31,777,824 |
| Maine | 5,478,047 | 7,329,052 |
| Massachusetts | 71,177,872 | 107,023,895 |
| New Hampshire | 3,200,084 | 5,350,445 |
| Rhode Island | 13,633,853 | 15,373,568 |
| Vermont | 1,133,367 | 1,547,462 |

New England collections from individual income taxes were:

| | 1933 | 1934 |
|---|---|---|
| Connecticut | $8,738,103 | $9,584,135 |
| Maine | 1,686,921 | 1,981,383 |
| Massachusetts | 17,799,481 | 22,423,644 |
| New Hampshire | 817,348 | 1,000,193 |
| Rhode Island | 3,987,247 | 3,714,102 |
| Vermont | 436,981 | 371,497 |

| | 1933 | 1934 |
|---|---|---|
| Connecticut | $5,625,921 | $7,492,249 |
| Maine | 1,288,334 | 1,475,603 |
| Massachusetts | 15,826,688 | 24,268,145 |
| New Hampshire | 315,605 | 716,091 |
| Rhode Island | 1,369,643 | 3,175,912 |
| Vermont | 168,706 | 369,104 |

| | 1933 | 1934 |
|---|---|---|
| Connecticut | $1,125,653 | $1,507,779 |
| Maine | 1,043,978 | 1,675,713 |
| Massachusetts | 10,414,268 | 20,997,015 |
| New Hampshire | 863,548 | 1,855,682 |
| Rhode Island | 1,874,788 | 2,606,791 |
| Vermont | 140,609 | 278,483 |

3 Bids and Proposals

PROPOSAL

National Industrial Recovery Project Mass. State No. M-12—PWA Docket No. 4642.

Notice to Contractors

Sealed proposals for (1) Structural Work, (2) Boiler Settings and (3) Piping, for Power Plant Changes at the Medfield State Hospital, Post Office Harding, Massachusetts, will be received by the Department of Mental Diseases at Room 167, State House, Boston until 2 o'clock P. M., standard time, Wednesday, February 13, 1935 and at that time and place will be publicly opened and read. Bids must be made upon the Department's prescribed special form of contract for projects financed and constructed under the terms of National Industrial Recovery Act and Chapter 365 of the Acts of 1933, to which is attached and made a part thereof the Special Contract Provisions Revised April 15, 1934 of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works and the State Emergency Public Works Commission. Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates prescribed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works must be paid on this project.

Without exception, no bid will be considered unless accompanied by the bidder's Certificate of Compliance, U. S. Government Form P. W. A. 61, Revised March, 1934, to the effect that the bidder is complying with and will continue to comply with each applicable Code of Fair Competition or, in the absence of such Code or Codes, with the President's Reemployment Agreement. Copies of this Certificate will be included with the "Instructions to Bidders."

All bidders shall be required to file with their bids a properly executed certificate of workmen's compensation insurance issued by a company satisfactory to the State Commissioner of Insurance.

Plans, specifications and contract forms may be obtained at Room 315, Ford Building, 15 Ashburton Place, Boston, upon deposit of amounts as follows: (1) Structural Work, $100; (2) Boiler Settings, $25; (3) Piping, $100. These amounts are to be included in the estimate and all checks but those of the successful bidders will be returned upon return of the plans and specifications. Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of the engineers, W. & L. Engineering Company, 694 Washington St., Boston, Massachusetts.

Bids must be accompanied by properly certified checks on, or certificates of deposit issued by, a responsible bank or trust company in amounts as follows: (1) Structural Work, $600; (2) Boiler Settings, $600; (3) Piping, $2000, made payable to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Checks and certificates will be returned after execution of the contract upon demand. A surety bond by an approved surety company will be required from the successful bidder in an amount not less than the full amount of the contract. The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals, or to accept any proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth, and no award can be made without the approval of the State Engineer, P. W. A. and of the State Emergency Public Works Commission.

The local registration office of the National Reemployment Service from which employee lists for this contract shall be obtained (as required in Article C of the Special Contract Provisions) is National Reemployment Service, Post Office Building, Norwood, Massachusetts.

DEPARTMENT OF MENTAL DISEASES,

Gen. Capital

ANNUAL INCOME IS LOWER

General Capital Corp. reports for calendar year 1934 net income after expenses and taxes, but before deduction of loss on sale of investments, of $198,251.

Net loss on sale of investments (based on cost) was $1,004,099, leaving a net operating loss of $805,848. The income before deduction of loss on sale of investments was equal to $1.35 a share on stock outstanding Dec. 31, 1934.

In the 1933 year net income was $199,051 and after deducting $1,002,628 net loss on sale of investments, there was a net operating loss of $803,577.

Laclede Gas

Laclede Gas Light Co., controlled by Utilities Power & Light Corp. reports for year ended Dec. 31, 1934, net income of $265,728 after interest, federal taxes, depreciation, etc., equal, after annual dividend requirements on the 5 per cent preferred, to $1.31 a share on the 107,000 shares of $100 par common, against $622,812, or $4.65 a common share in 1933.

McCall

McCall Corp. report for year ended Dec. 31, 1934, certified by independent auditors, shows net profit of $1,185,075 after depreciation, reserves for federal taxes and other deductions, equal to $2.20 a share on 539,360 shares, against $1,170,988, or $2.17 a share on 540,060 shares in 1933.

Again Our Great Prosperity President, Calvin Coolidge, Wrote:

NORTHAMPTON, June 21, 1931—The centralization of power in Washington which nearly all members of Congress DEPLORE in their speech and then SUPPORT by their votes, steadily increases. The latest report is that the Federal employment service will have a bureau in every State and the District of Columbia.

The farmer, who was the shining example of sturdy independence, has intrusted the Government with finding him a market. Now the wage earner is to look to the same source to find employment. Individual self-reliance is disappearing and local self-government is being undermined.

A revolution is taking place which will leave the people dependent upon the Government and place the Government where it must decide questions that are far better left to the people to decide for themselves. Finding markets will develop into fixing prices and finding employment will develop into fixing wages. The next step will be to furnish markets and employment or in default pay a bounty and dole. Those who look with apprehension on these tendencies do not lack humanity but are influenced by the belief that the result of such measures will be to deprive the people of character and LIBERTY.

Now Is the Time to Add to Our Air Supremacy

TOWARD the maintenance of American leadership in the conquest of the air, the report of the Federal Aviation Commission is a timely and most valuable contribution.

This commission, of which Clark Howell of Georgia was the able chairman and Professor James C. Hunsaker, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. Edward P. Warner, the first assistant secretary of the navy for aeronautics, were among the members, is the twentieth federal agency to investigate American aviation in the last fifteen years.

It is the privilege of the Howell commission to show the way in which this new industry can be saved from imminent collapse which would put "the common defense" in jeopardy.

THE Howell commission recommends:

First, that the goal of American aviation policy shall be to maintain world leadership in both domestic and overseas air transport.

Second, that the execution of this policy shall be entrusted to an air commerce commission, created by Congress and clothed with authority to regulate service and charges to the public, allocate all Federal aid appropriated by Congress to maintain American leadership in the air, and in general to advise on matters of national policy.

Third, that the purchase of aircraft by the army and navy shall be governed by regulations which will encourage competition of quality rather than of price and that a steady building and replacement program shall be followed.

Such a program would bring order out of existing chaos in the manufacturing industry and help to stabilize the production of aircraft.

FOURTH, that Federal aid be extended directly for the development of American air transport over foreign trade routes both by flying boat and by airship.

The commission points out that in the North Atlantic airships would compete only with foreign flagships and foreign airships and would thus supply America's answer to the challenge of the Queen Mary, Normandie, Rex and other foreign rivals in that area.

Thanks to the diligence and distinction with which the Howell commission has discharged the mission entrusted to it by the Congress and the President, there has been enunciated for the first time in the history of American aviation a national policy accompanied by a program of specific action to establish and maintain the policy on a firm foundation.

Now is the time and the White House and the Capitol are the place to maintain and enhance America's leadership in the air—a leadership won by the genius of American brains and by the blood of American heroes who gave their lives to add new glory to the flag.

No Salary Increase
Takes Right Stand

A bill before the Legislature provides for increasing the salary of the Governor of Massachusetts to $20,000 from $10,000 a year.

"I regard the salary that was in operation when I was elected," declared Governor Curley, "as in the nature of a contract and I believe that contract should be observed."

There are many politicians who would have no scruples about accepting an increased salary at the expense of the public.

A Fellow-Citizen
Mayor Hagan's Example

"They cannot remove snow from sidewalks of other citizens and I am not entitled to special privileges because I am mayor.

"I will have my sidewalks shoveled at my own expense."

Town Meetings Start
Old New England

The current week ushers in the first big flock of annual town meetings in Massachusetts. They will continue through March in various parts of New England.

The town meeting as an American institution dates back to the Colonies.

Practically all the voters turn out. It stimulates public interest in local problems as no substitute can do.

The affairs of any town are pretty apt to be well cared for as the result of deliberations at such gatherings.

We hope New England will never see the day when its good old town meeting system is regarded as "behind the times."

Scraps of Paper

In these days, when Federal taxation is heavy and daily becoming heavier, when the Government of the United States is running a deficit that is unparalleled in history, how fine it would be to receive back SOME of those hundreds of millions of dollars that were generously shoveled out AFTER THE WORLD WAR ENDED to our supposedly honorable associates in the war—loans that were made between November 11, 1918, and March 30, 1921!

What are we getting, with the exception of Finland's payments?

By Elsie Robinson

ON DOING A GOOD DEED

It's easy enough to do a good or brave deed, but it's a tough job to be nice about it afterward.

Elsie Robinson

Take me, f'rinstance. Do I like Being Noble? Of course I do. I fairly dote on it. There is naturally a thrill in the act itself. But I might as well come clean—there is also the gratification of my vanity.

Everyone is pleased with me. I am enormously pleased with myself. Usually I am forced by the conventions to repress such delight but, having committed a Good Deed, I can hog the spotlight to my heart's content.

THEIR MISTAKE

Also—goody-goody!—I can put the bee on my enemies. Thought I was just a wash-out—did they? Didn't believe I could act swell, like this—huh? Well, I've shown 'em! Wonder what they're saying now? Bet they feel like plugged nickels!

Yes, Being Good is a lot of fun. And I've yet to see a human, however hardened, who didn't enjoy it now and then. But living up to it afterwards—there's something else!

For, as everyone knows, Good People are expected to be humble. They shouldn't boast. They shouldn't gloat. They should never, never throw it up to anyone, no matter how great the provocation.

Indeed, a really Good Person isn't supposed to even be aware of the fact. Genuine goodness is not only modest but also unconscious — as involuntary as breathing.

NOBLE COMMAND

A most noble admonition! And how wonderful to be like that—moving graciously upon one's way, committing righteousness and never knowing that it happened.

But do I ever act in the glorified manner? Notta chance, stranger; notta chance! My left hand not only knows exactly what my right hand is doing, but is usually informed of the fact well in advance and reminded of it thereafter frequently.

I am not, let me hasten to state, proud of this fact. To the contrary, it fills me with rage, shame and disgust.

Nothing, to my notion, is more revolting than a self-conscious saint . . . those pious pests who continually check up their virtuous acts as if they were government bonds and proceed to collect dividends on 'em. Yet, doggonit, that's exactly what I do myself!

When it comes to being humble about my Good Deeds I'm just about as coy as a press agent for a strip burlesque.

And if there's no one to listen to my line 'n give me a hand, I'll do it myself. Which is, as well I know, the lowest form of self-expression. Nevertheless I spend abominable moments telling myself Wotta Girl I am . . . Just a Great Big Golden Hearted Human that never is really appreciated.

Poor Soul. But never mind; some day, after you're dead, people will know they had A Saint In Their Midst, and then maybe they'll be sorry.

So just go on being Your Own Dear Sweet Self, and never mind if an Ungrateful World doesn't understand. For Virtue Is Its Own Reward Anyway, Elsie, Darling!

Trash? Bilge? Of course it is. Yet, there I go, handing myself eyewash like that—me, what's supposed to be an intelligent egg!

Fighting an Idea
By Hendrik Van Loon

Hitler continues to puzzle us. We try to explain him in articles, in books, in magazines and newspapers and editorials.

But nobody, not even the people who thought that they knew their Germany and who try to approach the subject without any prejudice, can quite explain him, nor can they discover any sound reason for his tremendous popularity.

But I would like to suggest that we ourselves may have a key to Hitler, and to all the man stands for, and to the incredible hold he has upon his followers, right in our own backyard.

Neither of them has ever been exposed to that sort of worldly experience which is apt to give a man a somewhat better understanding of the useful principle of "live and let live."

In short, both of them, to an outsider who has never fallen under their spell, are third-rate figures with a very decided gift of appealing to the masses by means of their own particular sort of oratory, but for the rest devoid of all of those characteristics which we usually associate with the idea of a true leader of men—a hero.

Yet—it would be folly to deny it—both have succeeded in making themselves historical figures of first-rate importance.

One cannot become an historical figure of first-rate importance without some sort of qualifications. The question we therefore must ask ourselves is this: What are those qualifications?

* * *

Right here is where I must disagree with people who reason that way. They overlook one very important fact. They do not seem to have realized that there are two sorts of dictators in this world.

There are leaders who have achieved greatness as outstanding personalities, and there are leaders who have come to the fore as the embodiment of an idea.

Alexander the Great and Julius Caesar and Napoleon and that type of leader, or dictator, owed their exalted positions to the fact that they were outstanding personalities.

Hitler and Long do not need to be outstanding personalities, because they are the incorporation of an idea.

A few of our historical dictators like Mussolini and Lenin were a combination of the two sort of leaders I have just enumerated.

Afterwards, when he had turned his back upon the revolutionary ideals—liberty, fraternity, equality, and war unto the palaces but peace unto the hovels of the poor—then his terrific personality carried him over into the first group and allowed him to carry on for another fifteen years, although he was really defeated the moment he ceased to be an idea and became a mere man.

* * *

You cannot possibly fight an idea with mere physical force and hope for a lasting victory. You can only fight an idea with another idea; if possible, with a superior one. Without a Versaille there never would have been an Adolf Hitler. Without a Depression, there never would have been a Huey Long.

Stars and Stripes

By Edwin C. Hill
The Stavisky Swindle
THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The final count is at hand in the Stavisky affair, and the figure is $12,000,000. Scarcely a drop in the bucket when compared to other historic swindles.

Edwin C Hill

In fact, it is only about one one-hundredth of the amount which the slick and sardonic Ivar Kreuger took from the pockets of the wise and the gullible between Ryjavik and Capetown.

And yet it threatened to pull down the French Republic, caused barricades to be raised and volleys to be fired in Paris streets and overthrew three governments.

LIKE NEW FIRE

About every other day the fire breaks through to scorch the reputation of some member of the judiciary or parliament, to send others to the duelling grounds or to bring attention to the plight of Mme. Stavisky.

Only the other day she made about her fifth unsuccessful attempt to be released from prison on bail.

Usually it is the easiest thing in the world to get out of a French jail, unless held on a capital charge, but in the Stavisky case no one in authority is taking a chance on releasing the widow of the rogue for whom iron bars no prison made.

This fine-looking woman, once Arlette Simone, a mannequin, was a short 18 months ago riding around in a pale blue limousine with a chauffeur in white livery.

WIDOW LOCKED UP

Those were the days when "Handsome Alex" raced his horses, gave spectacular parties and gambled for high stakes with the Greeks at Biarritz and Deauville.

The big game began at 40. By that time he was possessed of quite a "front" and he proceeded to cash in on it. Strong-featured and blue-eyed, he had a dash of magnetism in his make-up. He engineered a 4,000,000 franc swindle and went through all but 15,000 francs before the gendarmes tore him away from his champagne.

American justice is chained lightning compared to that of the French Republic. Bribes, lawyers and doctors' certificates kept Stavisky at large, and he made use of his time to plan his grand coup—the Bayonne Pawnshop Swindle.

In France the pawnshops are municipal institutions—banks at which the poor man may negotiate a loan, on, say the kitchen stove. The pawnshops in turn are authorized to issue bonds up to the extent of the value of the collateral they hold.

Now Bayonne is a rather unimportant city of 40,000 near the Spanish frontier, and if its pawnshops ever held $1,000,000 worth of collateral, that was a tremendous amount. Monsieur Stavisky, conniving with dishonest city officials, put out $12,000,000 worth of Bayonne pawnshop bonds.

When they found him, they said that he had shot himself.

Norris Raps Farley Jobs, 'Postoffice Politics'

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Senator Norris of Nebraska is not only a true American and a great Senator but he is also a profound believer in those words of Holy Scripture which warn against the ability of any man to serve more than one master at a time.

Senator Norris

Because of this belief the statesman from Nebraska has introduced in the Senate a bill which undertakes to suit the action of the Government, insofar as the office of Postmaster General is concerned, to the word of the Bible's warning.

The Norris bill provides "that no Postmaster or other official of the Post Office Department, including the Postmaster General himself, shall be chairman or a member of any political committee, and that he shall not take part in the management of any political campaign."

This bill further provides that the Postmaster General shall be directed "to remove any official guilty of such practice, and the President is directed to remove the Postmaster General if he engages in any such political activity."

BASED ON MERIT

By the terms of the Norris bill all postmasters and all postal employes would owe their appointments to "merit and efficiency" as established by tests and records made and kept for the sole purpose of enabling the appointing power to limit the entrance to and the advancement in the postal service to the proven qualifications of the candidates and appointees, regardless of their political affiliations or their political endorsers.

Mr. Norris in introducing this measure is moved by the same desire to promote the public welfare that prompted his work for the Norris amendment to the Federal Constitution which abolished "The Lame Duck Session" of the Congress and also his amendment to the Constitution of his own state of Nebraska which consolidated into one house the two houses of the Nebraska Legislature.

SINCERE SUPPORTER

There is no more sincere supporter of President Roosevelt's leadership in either House of Congress than Senator Norris. There is no more efficient supporter of the Roosevelt program, in general, than this veteran legislator.

In going to the rescue of the thousands of faithful and devoted public servants in the postal service from the political machinations from which they suffer whenever the postmaster general is permitted to serve his party also as chairman of its national committee, Senator Norris is in reality going also to the rescue of the public.

For the public always suffers when the postal service under any administration, be it Republican or Democratic, is treated as if it were nothing more or less than a cog in a vast political machine.

The best postmaster general, if he had a conscience as he would have were he the best, would find himself embarrassed many times a day if at the same time he attempted to function as chairman of the national committee of his party.

STILL CHAIRMAN

In fact, the present postmaster general is still chairman of the Democratic National Committee, although he has been nominated and confirmed in the office of postmaster general for nearly two years.

Every executive department is embarrassed day after day by the presence in the Cabinet of the chief money raiser and patronage dispenser of the party in power.

And within recent weeks officers of the Army recommended for retirement from the service with a year's pay have not hesitated to appeal to the postmaster-general-chairman for assistance and in some instances the records will show, if the report be true, that they have not appealed in vain.

When the sinister power of a campaign committee chairman, functioning simultaneously as far as to sap the morale of the armed forces it ought to be checked before it undermines the integrity of the national defense.

PASS THE BILL

The enactment of this progressive measure will not only strengthen the leadership of the power but it will purge the postal service and protect other branches of the federal service from a pernicious political activity which, if allowed to continue, will soon become a national scandal and disgrace.

No man be he Democrat or Republican can serve the people of the United States as Postmaster-General if he has the audacity to attempt at the same time to serve the politicians of his party as chairman of its national committee.
